

THE LANCE

A St. Andrews Presbyterian College Student Publication

Volleyball Benefit Raises over $1000

Steve Skinner

Those who attended the benefit volleyball tournament Nov. 21 claim it as being the largest crowd to fill Harris Courts in recent memory. Promotion directors estimated that well over 700 students, faculty, and local townspeople gathered to support the worthy cause.

The event raised over $1,000 for the Southeastern Family Violence Center. Its branch office is located in Laurinburg. A contact point at the center, Director Anne Doolen, was "elated" at the turnout which supported the center not only financially through ticket sales and proceeds, but also in valuable public awareness.

The center, located in Lumberton, North Carolina, is home to victims of domestic violence. It houses abused women and children, providing a shelter for them as a place to stay in time of need.

A marketing class at St. Andrews conceived and initiated the idea of a volleyball tournament as a benefit fundraiser for the center. St. Andrews students completely organized and operated the event. Director of the event, James C. Rollen said, "Operations went smoothly despite the learning process of organizing this event."

The winner of the benefit's title game was the Southwood Supply Company. They faced the 1987 DIAC season champion Lady Knights volleyball team from St. Andrews, who rolled in the first eleven points of the match unanswered. In all, just two games sealed the title victory for Southwood Supply.

The event began with a face-off between four squads from St. Andrews and the community. A student team defeated a faculty team, both from the college, in first round action. As well, Southwood Supply Company outlasted Johnson Brothers Construction Company. Southwood Supply then defeated the student team to reach the finals for the match against the Lady Knights, who received a bye into the finals. All teams with the exception of the Lady Knights consisted of four men and two women.

Halftime activities kept the crowd in gear during several breaks with a special pre-Christmas performance from the St. Andrews Chorale. Santa Claus arrived (via a red-suited, Grey Brewington) to deliver goodies. Domino's Pizza provided free pizza.

Ten members of both the St. Andrews and Laurinburg communities received awards. These included: Mark Powell, Nathan Gibson, Carl and Margaret Bennett, Bill Scott, Clarence Tapp, Peggy Floyd, Mel Bringle, Sybil Sikes, Anne Doolen, and Joann Williams.

Symphony Gives Free Concert Saturday

Jill Stricklin

Residents of Scotland County and students of St. Andrews are being presented with a Christmas gift in the form of a free concert by the North Carolina Symphony. The concert, which will be performed on December 5 at 7:30 pm on the Harris Courts at St. Andrews, is being given in honor of James and Morris Morgan, who have been generous contributors to the symphony for several years. St. Andrews is opening the concert to the community to thank the residents for their support of the college. "This is our Christmas present to the Laurinburg area community," stated St. Andrews President A. P. Perkinson, Jr., "The community has supported us and made all our lives easier through the years. This concert and the reception to follow are small tokens of the appreciation we feel for the relationship we have."

The symphony, with Jackson Purkhurst conducting, will perform a variety of classical and seasonal pieces. Among those which will be performed are pieces by Franz von Suppe, Piotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky, George Bizet, Gian Carlo Menotti, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Sergei Prokofiev, and Leroy Anderson. There will also be a Christmas Carol Sing-A-Long, which will feature such popular favorites as "The First Noel" and "Deck The Halls." Following the performance

See Symphony page 12

Instrumental in success of volleyball benefit: l-r Ann Leist-White, Anne Dollen, Jim Rollen, Maggie Johnson, Carolyn Bishop-McLeod.

Granville Transformer

Still Out

Dave Snyder

The temporary transformer outside Granville will continue to be that dorm's power source as long as a dispute remains unsettled between St. Andrews and the McCarter Electric company of Laurinburg.

The new transformer blew during the 90 day limited warranty, but McCarter Electric personnel charge that the repairs they have performed are not covered by the terms of the warranty. They will not return the transformer until the bill of several thousand dollars is paid.

Finding a permanent transformer for Granville is on the agenda of college purchasing agent Harvie Jordan. He said he is taking "affirmative action" to obtain the transformer, which may include involving the school attorney.

Inside

Black Christmas?
Mzala Speaks
page 2

Campus Radio Off the Air
page 3

Library Expansion
Underway
page 9