Joel Oppenheimer Baseball Poem Contest

Deborah L. Kelly

"Baseball nut all his life," Ron Bayes said of the late Joel Oppenheimer. Oppenheimer, a Black Mountain poet and adjunct professor of literature, had some of his works published by the St. Andrews Press, including those that dealt with baseball.

In honor of his memory and his love of baseball, a contest has been announced. Poems about baseball should be submitted to Ron Bayes by April 1.

Poems should be single-spaced and not exceed 100 lines. Name and address should be on every page. If the author wants the poem returned, then a self addressed-stamped envelope must be included.

The contest will be judged by one off-campus judge who like Oppenheimer, is a "baseball nut poet."

The winning poem will be featured in an upcoming St. Andrews Review.

December Fire Not The First in Granville Flashback from The Lance Archives

*As Reported by Eric English
September 30, 1983*

A fire in Granville Hall's laundry room on September 19 raised some serious questions about fire safety and preventiveness at St. Andrews. A small group of students noticed smoke in the laundry room about 10:30 p.m. No one seemed too concerned and it was a few minutes before anyone notified the authorities? How would you call the Fire Department? I dialed 911--no answer. I dialed zero...at last! An operator connected me with the Laurinburg emergency service (not the Fire Dept.). However, the switchboard operator promised to notify the Fire Department.

The fire was out by the time the authorities arrived. Bill Hill described his heroic deed to Fire Chief Jim Lytch, "...There was a blaze in electrical(?)...flames about knee high(!!!). I held my breath, squirted it, and it went out."

Security officer Nell Flowers was notified along with Mrs. Brown, R.D. for Concord Hall who both helped calm the gathering crowd.

Seventeen firemen responded to the emergency call within minutes. Fire Chief Lytch expressed concern over the pedestrian traffic blocking the direct path to the dorm since they had difficulty driving through the parking lot. The men probed around for 45 minutes. Chief Lytch was informed then that the dryers had been acting strangely for weeks. Chief Lytch asked me, "What was the normal procedure for reporting this type of faculty appliance?"

"I told my resident director two weeks ago," I answered. Now for a few questions: When were the laundry rooms last inspected by maintenance? By the Fire Inspector? Where are the electrical fire extinguishers? Where are the sprinkler systems? Or the smoke detectors? Where were the emergency telephone numbers posted? (If there are no emergency numbers in your suites or lounges contact security, they will get them for you; or will they?)

In regards to the fire Chief Lytch said, "It started behind the dryer," and the reason for the blaze was, "Indeterminant!"

As the chief walked back into the night and flashing lights he turned and added, "Tell your folks that's not a way to get a dryer!" How do you "want to get a dryer", folks?

DeTamble: Testing Automated Catalog

Elaine L. Franz

DeTamble Library Needs Your Help! Students are asked to stop by the DeTamble Library from Monday, February 20 to Sunday, March 12 to experience the BiblioFile Intelligent Catalog that is being considered as part of the automated system for the library. The demonstration model is not based on DeTamble holdings, but on one of a similar size.

After using the automated catalog located by the reference desk on the first floor, students are asked to complete the questionnaires to help the library staff in their evaluation.
