The past two weeks have been a time of great tension on the St. Andrews campus. Heated debates over the war in the Gulf have left St. Andrews divided into two distinct factions. St. Andrews has always been a strong community however, and in spite of our differences we have been partying together quite a bit, especially now that the war is over. As we sat down to write this column, we realized that one of the main ways we, as St. Andrews students, have acted as a whole over the past two weeks is our seeming lack of coordination and common sense. We have therefore compiled a list of:

The Top Ten Stupid Moves Made by St. Andrews Students in the Past Two Weeks

1. Chris Nagle lights Eric Corbett's door on fire just to catch a buzz.
2. Epidemic of wild chin hair growth sweeps campus. Do guys actually think this is attractive or do they just have cold chins?
3. Cup tries to start a new dance craze-the knee dislocater.
4. Jamie Donaldson crashes and burns while attempting to walk on fire.
5. Neet Hair Remover is maliciously poured into the shampoo in the men's locker room- resulting in the total baldness of several baseball players.
6. Badih mistakes his arm for a Camel Light and catches it on fire in Orange Courtyard.
7. The boys of Meck jump on Albemarle's Mardi Gras floats in an attempt to save the campus after mistaking them for actual dragons.
8. Senioritis kicks in, dozens of seniors run naked into Lake Ansley Moore.
9. Bill Cox throws himself down the hill of Granville after learning that the Senior Party kegs are dry.
10. Rugby players Kerry Smith and Scott Gregory begin to believe they are actual rhinos and charge each other. Unfortunately, the collision failed to knock the sense back into either one of them.

The two big parties of the last couple of weeks were Mardi Gras and Rugby's charity benefit. Mardi Gras was by far the best party Albemarle has ever thrown. It was obvious that the residents spent a great deal of time working on the decorations and they looked great. Every partygoer went home with a smile and a ton of cheap jewelry.

The rugby benefit was also a huge success. All the bands were terrific. Everyone loved listening to Paul Bullard, Ward Conant, and Kaille Padgett sing. Prediction: 1996-Pipe Dreams receives Best New Artist Grammy. While the bands were great the bonfire wasn't. It never really got going. Nevertheless, everyone had a good time. The rugby team threw another great party.

Well, that's about it. We'll see you after Spring Break. Have a great one! Remember, we saw what you did and we know who you are!

SGA Report

By Abe VanWingerden
 Senate President

Student Government is hard at work again and this had led to some success as we have begun the spring term. First, I would like to once again encourage each of you to keep pressing forward with the recycling effort. The City of Laurinburg has been pleased with the effort over the first two weeks, but we need more effort and participation if this is to become a long term success.

On another note, the Student Senate has passed a proposal concerning smoking in SAGA. After much debate over every available option, the Senate decided to pass a proposal which created smoking and non-smoking areas in the dining area. Under the proposal, the cove and the front half of SAGA by the salad bar will become non-smoking areas. The back-half of the dining area will be reserved for smoking. This policy will not be enforced with rigid punishment, but with common courtesy. The Senate also realized that this idea is not perfect, so this proposal will be reviewed in April. Also, there will be a slot on the general ballot in April with the question being proposed whether smoking should be allowed or disallowed in the dining hall. This vote will involve a simple yes or no. The Senate will then analyze this information and decide which avenue to take. If you have any suggestions or comments on this issue, contact your respective Senator.

Thirdly, the Senate has received the results of the Student Life survey that was given in November concerning the performance of the Student Life Staff. These results produced some interesting numbers, and they have given us the information needed as we chart our course for the future. The results will be published to the entire community in the next couple of weeks when a final report is available.

Lastly, it is difficult to print all of the information and activities of Student Government, so I hope that you will take the opportunity to attend a Senate meeting in the near future. We meet on Monday at 9:00 pm in the SGA Conference Room, which is downstairs in the Belk Center. These meetings are open to the entire St. Andrews community, and they usually last about one hour. Also, if you have any concerns or questions, please contact Bill Cox or myself at 277-0560.

Rhinos Scorched by the Devils

By Abe VanWingerden
 Staff Writer

Having not played a match in over three weeks, the Rhinos traveled to Durham on Saturday for a match with the Duke Graduate School. As has been the norm whenever the Rhinos play the Blue Devils, the field was one huge mud bath due to a combination of overnight showers and a previous game that was played on the field prior to the Rhinos-Blue Devils matchup. This made the game fun for the fans who traveled up from Laurinburg, but it made it difficult for both teams who spend most of the match picking themselves up off the ground due to the muddy conditions.

The match was physical throughout with much of the action being controlled in the scrum play due to the experience of both teams. But the Blue Devils were able to break through on two separate occasions in the first half to take an early 12-0 lead. The Rhinos then seemed to pick up their intensity, but as the playing conditions worsened, it became more difficult to mount an offensive surge. The Rhinos were able to convert on a penalty kick by Mike Pesakis to make the halftime score 12-3 in favor of the Blue Devils.

The second half was controlled by the Rhinos as much of the action took place in their half of the field. But the Blue Devils withstood each offensive push by the Rhinos with strong team defense. The Blue Devils were able to add one more score near the end of the game which made the final score 18-3 in favor of the Blue Devils.

The second game was much of the same story except that the conditions worsened. With only twenty players in uniform due to injuries to some key players, the Rhinos were worn down by the Blue Devils who were able to field fifteen new players in the second game. The first half was evenly played, but the Blue Devils score repeatedly in the second half as darkness began to fall upon the field. The Rhinos were able to test some players at new positions which will undoubtedly help them in the future as the state tournament approaches in April.

The Rhinos are now 0-4, but they travel to Davidson this weekend to face a team who is not in the upper bracket of teams as is Carolina and Duke Graduate School. The Rhinos have beaten Davidson on two previous occasions but have also fell to Davidson on two other occasions, so this should be an interesting and hotly contested match. Anyone who wishes to attend can obtain directions from any of the Rhinos.
