

Smile for the Birdie, and say "Cheese!"

Look at this, "who's the hot, new chick on campus? I wonder what she does for a living?"

Lance photo by Rooney Coffman

The Gathering place was packed on Tuesday November 3, to view history in the making, as onlookers witnessed the defeat of the Republican President George Bush.

Lance photo by Rooney Coffman

Roxie G. Foland (left) is awarded the 1992 American Education Week Award by Jennifer White (right) a senior in the Early Elementary Education Program at St. Andrews.

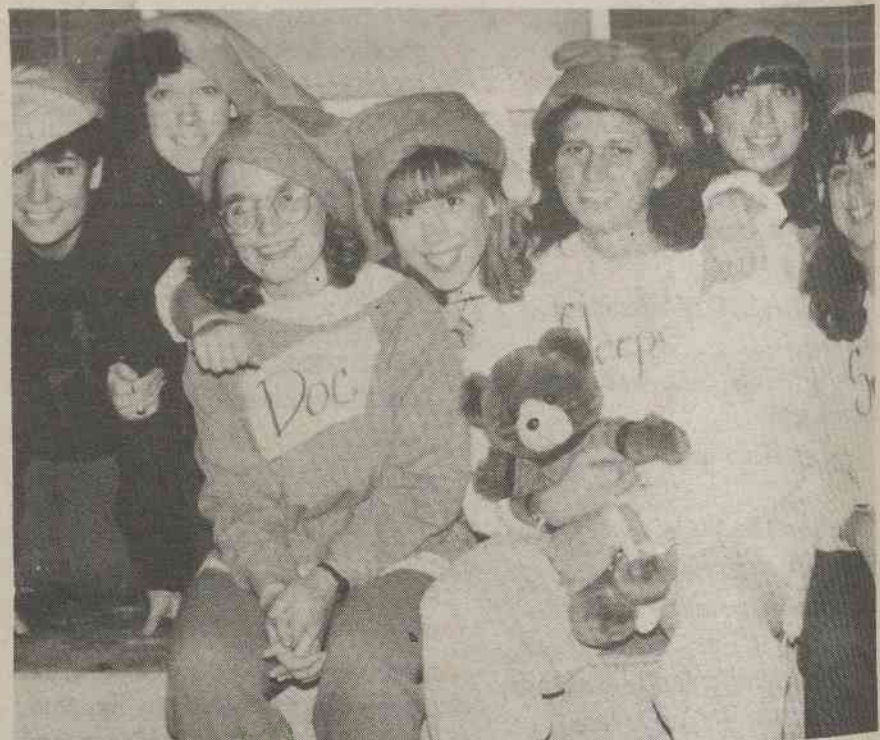

Saint Andrew's Presbyterian College's teacher education department and student chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE) celebrated American Education Week with an annual reception and banquet Wednesday, November eighteenth. The reception was in the Gathering Place of the Belk Center and the banquet followed in the Belk Main Lounge.

As in the past, the highlight of the evening was the appearance of the '93 North Carolina Teacher of the Year, Dixie Friend Abernathy, a seventh-grade science teacher at Southwest Junior High School in Gaston County.

Abernathy is a graduate of Wake Forest University and holds a Master's Degree in Educational Administration from Winthrop University. She has taught for five years and does not believe in passive learning. For students in her science classes, "active" is the key word.

Abernathy believes that students learn best by doing things, and in her classes, ample opportunity is provided for learning to take place. During the 1991-92 school year,

During Halloween Snow White's dwarfs decided to pay St. Andrews a visit. From left to right: Kim Jenkinson, Andria Brodhan, Kerry Nuti, Vikki Evans, Shannon Rivers, Colleen Daly, and her sister.

*A man of means by no means,
King of the Road. --
Roger Miller (1932-1992)*