

Five SA athletes receive Awards

Communications

Five St. Andrews athletes have received 1992-93 academic all-conference awards from the Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference: George Hite, Jeffery Markosky, Michelle Allman, Erika "Riki" Point and Derek Smith.

To receive academic all-conference honors, a student competing in a varsity sport must reach his or her junior year with a 3.5 grade point average or better.

Hite is a forward on the St. Andrews soccer team. He is the son of Barbara Lynn and George MacWayne Hite, and was graduated from Kubasaki High School in Okinawa, Japan. He is a visual arts major.

Markosky, a baseball Player, is the son of Edward Markosky of Mahanoy City, Pa. and a graduate of Marian Catholic High School. He is a business major.

Volleyball player Allman is from Del Rio, Tex., and was graduated from Brindisi American High School in Brindisi, Italy. She is the daughter of Karen H. and Dr. James D. Allman, Lt. Col. She is majoring in Spanish and German.

Honored athletes from front to back Jeffrey Markosky, Ericka Point, Derek Smith (L), George Hite (R). Machelle Allman not pictured.

Point plays center on St. Andrews' women's basketball team and outside hitter on the volleyball team. She is from Rogersville, Tenn., where she was graduated from Cherokee High School. She is the daughter of Nancy and Jim Point. She is majoring in allied health and seeking teaching certification in Biology.

Baseball player Smith is from Baraboo, Wi., where he was graduated from Baraboo

see ATHLETES, page 3

Terry Sanford honored at St. Andrews Dinner

Matt Peck Staff Editor

Friends and colleagues gathered together April 2 to honor former North Carolina Senator Terry Sanford with an appreciation dinner.

Sanford who is an alumnus of St. Andrews, and a former governor of North Carolina, was joined by 250 other guest including the current Governor Jim Hunt, other former governors, a federal circuit court judge, who happens to be an old childhood friend of Sanford, Chairman of the Duke Endowment Committee, and a former president of The University of North Carolina.

Sanford was a freshman

Sanford

of The Presbyterian Mens College before it joined with Flora MacDonald Academy to become St. Andrews. He transferred to The University of North Carolina and received a bachelors degree; after graduation attended the university's law school.

Sam Ragan, and St. Andrews' professors Ronald Bayes and Robert J. Hopkins headed up the committee to plan the appreciation banquet.

Ragan, who was master of ceremonies described the event as "historic and significant, because never before have the current governor and so many predecessors been together at the same time in the same room on such friendly terms."

Although the event honored a democratic senator, it was nonpartisan. Former Republican governors Jim Martin and James E. Holshouser, Jr., who is the chairman of St. Andrews

Board of Trustees, both attended the ceremonies.

Gov. Holshouser delivered the welcome for Sanford. In his welcome he promoted Sanford for his commitment to state and country, and his courageous actions as a promoter of public education.

Present Governor, Jim Hunt commented on his association with Sanford's campaign team during the early 60's, he remarked, "It gave me a vision of what we could do for this state and what I could do as part of it."

Sanford was the first governor to begin the North Carolina Governors School Program at Salem College, Gov. Jim Hunt began the second school here at St. Andrews.

St. Andrews president, Thomas Reuschling, presented Sanford with a gift from the college, a piece of sculpture provided by art professor Stephanie McDavid.

Chapbook winner announced

The 1993 Chapbook winner is Michelle Iacona. She is a junior at St. Andrews.

Iacona is the daughter of Linda Brown and Michael Iocana of Rockingham.

Her winning selection was "Carnavale" which is a mixture of fiction and poetry. She mixes horror fiction with prose forming an eerie bridge to the unknown.

"I was real hopeful of winning the competition," states Miss Iacona.

The judge this yaer was Mr. Steve Allgood of Atlanta an alum of St. Andrews and former Chapbook winner.

Michelle is and english and music major, and a memeber of Alphi Chi Honor Society.

Dr. Reuschling is league's President

Matt Peck Staff Editor

The Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference has choosen Dr. Thomas L. Reuschling, president of St. Andrews as league president.

Reuschling will succeed The former league president, Dr. Jacob C. Martinson Jr., president of High Point College. He will serve a two year term.

The presidents and athletic represenatives of the eight colleges in the Carolinas Conference: Barton in Wilson, Belmont Abby in Belmont, Coker in South Carolina, High Point University, Lees-McRae in Banner Elk, Mt.

Olive College, Pfeiffer in Misenhemer and St. Andrews vote on the league president.

Other officers elected at the annual meeting were Pfeiffer College President, Dr. Zane Eagle, vice president, and Pfeiffer's faculty athletic represenative, Larry Durrett, who will serve as secretary.

Dr. Reuschling