CONFERENCE

plants and industries be invited to meet groups of students; and that counselors who are realistic be employed. There is, he said, a great challenge—bold and courageous in the job of training students for the real frontiers ahead. Technical improvements and growth in population are among the larger opportunities for years to come. Dr. Baer named the areas in which there is an acute shortage, the fields of health, science and business.

The conference reconvened at 2:45 P.M. at which time the various groups made reports. Mr. Gordon L. West, St. Augustine's College reported for the committee on "Implications for College Teaching and the Curriculum." The organization of the curriculum to take care of students whose potentialities prohibit them from producing good college work and better screening were ideas submitted by this committee.

Dr. George L. Davis, of Elizabeth City State Teachers College related the consideration of the group on "Occupational Information". This included making available to students sources of occupational information, the labor leaves and trends in occupational opportunities. At the end of this report, the Chairman of the Conference, Dr. S. D. Williams, acknowledged the presence of Dr. Helen Ringe of Washington, D. C.

Reporting for the group on "Occupational Inventory", was Mrs. E. W. Postell of Elizabeth City State Teachers College. This committee discussed counseling, emphasizing the relationship of the counselee and the counselor, information about occupations, and training for occupations, all of which help to make more self-sufficient individuals.
