

Leonard Slade The Campus Leader

The campus leader at Elizabeth City State College is Leonard Slade, a young man of dignity and high moral standards. His academic status and social status are true signs of good leadership.

I remember when he was campaigning for office. He approached me and asked me to make him a few signs for publicity. He stated, "I really do not go in for this type of thing, but the campus deos." I could see many desirable traits of leadership in him then.

After Slade was elected as the campus leader, he did not hesitate but started attacking various problems and events. There was the problem of cutting line in the dining hall. He put a stop to it by the means of social restriction letters. Once he was in line for dinner; a young man stepped in front of him, and began a conversation. Knowing the fellow was wrong, he said nothing, but continued to converse. The next day Slade passed the young man a letter of social restriction. This is the type of person he is. He knows what to do and the right time to do it.

The mere fact of being a leader does not bother Slade as a college student. During his spare time, one can always find him in the library. He has never missed his school since he enrolled at the Elizabeth City College. He is not a member of a fraternity, but he does hold membership in the Alpha Kappa Mu Honor Society.

He is a person of overwhelming politeness. A young lady does not have to worry when she is around him. By observing his many character traits, one could see his belief in democracy, for he is a strong advocate of freedom. As far as class system is concerned, he constitutes none. He treats everyone on an equal basis. I remember a trip the students went on to a basketball game at A and T College. For this he was responsible. Some of the young men began to get out of hand. Mr. Slade said not a word, but gave a sharp look. The corruption ceased.

Not only is he a strong believer in freedom of the individual, but worship also. Not too many Sunday mornings have passed that he did not attend Sunday school, or a church of his choice. Thinking of the many students on campus, Slade made it possible for the College Bus, Tilly, to take the students into the city, so they, too, could attend the churches.

Socially speaking, he is not a retarded person. He attends the majority of the dances held on campus. Although he may not be the best dancer on the floor, he seems to enjoy dancing. No matter what the activity may be, Slade's presence is always welcomed by the students. He is never a snob, but always a participant. Slade has not as yet chosen a steady companion on this campus. Who will the lucky girl be?

Leonard Slade is truly an ideal leader—socially, morally, religiously, and academically. Who could ask for more?

To Appreciate or Not to Appreciate

At times when we find dormitory life a bit difficult, it behooves us to wonder whether to appreciate or not to appreciate dormitory living.

Dormitory living, though sometimes frustrating, is a personal challenge to each of us to make adjustments to different situations and to learn the art of living harmoniously with other people. Let's accept this challenge and learn to appreciate dormitory living.

Just Someone to Care

If I had just someone to care for me How wonderful this world would be; Then I wouldn't have to search so hard.

For this is why to see When someone says the words "I care."

Who makes you want to do The things you never dreamed you could;

Of dreams both old and new. That "Someone" who cares for you Must stand through good or bad, Or else he cares no less for you.

Forget him—he's just a fad! But he who stands the test of time And thinks of how you fare, Keep him always by your side.

For he is the one who cares.

Delta Activities

Deltas Observe May Week

Delta Chi Chapter, of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority in observance of May Week, presented an Assembly Program on May 2. The speaker for the assembly was Dr. Louise Nixon Sutton, a national Delta Sigma Theta Committee Woman, who spoke on "How Do You Value Your Education?"

Dr. Sutton discussed the values of college education for its own sake in terms of the benefits to be derived therefrom and in terms of the preparation that it gives for future service to humanity. She stated that the college-educated person possesses those sensitivities basic to enjoying the finer things of life; that the college graduate receives $125,000 more in a lifetime earning than the high school graduate; and that the better the college grades, the more likely an individual is to obtain better paying jobs and also the more rapidly he is likely to advance.

Finally, Dr. Sutton, stated that one's superior opportunities in obtaining an education place great responsibilities on the individual. Such a person should be willing to give his time, talent and money in volunteer service for community improvement. Such service is not only gratifying and self-fulfilling in itself, but it distinguishes both the individual and the institution from which he graduated.

In keeping with the Delta's tradition, a stack of paperback books was presented to the librarian, Mr. Hobbs Thompson, for use in the Browning Room of the G. R. Little Library.

Delta Chi chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority plans to continue its library project, "Ride the Winged Horse."
