This timely book dramatizes the human issues lying behind the passage in 1964 of the Civil Rights Act. It is the story of a courageous World War II Marine veteran and the formidable difficulties he met in trying to free his family and all people from their built-in racial prejudices that gave rise to segregation, inequality, heartbreak and bloodshed.

Dr. Rose Brown

Youth Counselor at the Mount Vernon Baptist Church.

Dr. Brown is an articulate, informed, and masterful orator and well qualified to speak on the American Education Week theme, "Invest in Learning." She stressed the necessity of being prepared in today's competitive world, and emphasized the need for those persons investing in learning to acquire, absorb and develop the additional knowledge which will permit them to be head and shoulders over those who are not fortunate enough or who do not have the opportunity to secure this additional and advanced knowledge.

Other participants on the program were Sandra Trotman, 65 SNEA, who recited "A Prayer for Teachers;" Carol Ashe, 65, Kappa Delta Pi, who introduced the principal speaker; Mr. Balou who entertained with an organ selection of "Toccata;" and Mr. Andrew Hamlett, who explained the principal purposes of American Education Week. Another outstanding feature of the program was the performance of the Elizabeth City State College Choir in their rendition of the spiritual, "My Lord What a Morning," under the direction of Miss Evelyn A. Johnson.

Those who were not present at this assembly program, certainly missed an invigorating experience.

Talent on Display

over this one Annie Bass took the scene with "Only Those In Love." Next came the Rocking Vikings with soloist Sonny P. Penn doing "Mary's Little Lamb." The Vikings then took over with the Wallace Brothers' "Lover Prayer." Silence fell among the audience. The JC's, Dorothy Sherrod, Doris Diggins, Geneva Peanort and Joan Smith came out with the Troys' "Lovers Concerto." Thomas Evans tried to bring the audience back to this dimension with "Good Times."

After all these heart touching songs, Albert Turner, a great comedian, brought in a few jokes to get some laughs. Mr. M. S. Walker showed us what it is like to be a drummer. He was simply great. "Stony" as he was called used to play with such groups as The Expressions.

The Doorlettes came on with "There's No Other Like My Baby." The girls couldn't take it.

If you think a boy can take anything, you're wrong. You should have seen them while Joanne Fitzgerald opened their hearts with "Any Old Time of the Day" and "House Without A Home." Annie King broke out with just what they needed, "Rescue Me." When Dorothy Sherrod came out with "Stop! Look What You're Doing To Me" and "Love Makes You Do Foolish Things," I was told that they had to take one boy completely out.

Joyce Grantham set silence as she sang "Down The Aisles" and "Wish Someone Would Care." The Expressions took over with "The Way You Do The Things To You."

The last number was rendered by the band.

If you missed this exciting talent show, I know you'll never miss another.

Flowers For Queen "Bess"

"MISS ECSC", BESSIE CARR; PRESIDENT WALTER N. RIDLEY.

In Memory of J.F.K.

I
I hear the trampling of the feet,
The solemn sound of muffled
drums beat,
The tolling of the church bells peal
And the echoing clops of a
prancing steed,
In memory of thee, O, J.F.K.

II
I can see the grim procession go
Down the street from the White House door.
An occasional glitter of a caisson
wheel,
The trail of a flag draped cortege
weave
Laden, heavy with thee, O, J.F.K.

III
I can hear the echoes of thy spirited voice
Resounding the rights of free men
which thou didst proclaim,
Of civil liberties for minorities in
this our land,
To the most distant corner of the Communist band.
Echoes of thee, O, J.F.K.

IV
I see the precision of an honor
guard perform
With race, creed, and color
unknown,
Of soldiers, sailors, coast
guardsmen marines
Unmolested, unsurpassed,
uninterrupted, unafraid,
Symbolic of thee, O, J.F.K.

V
I hear the roar of aircraft above
The bellowing thunder of the
cannon's salute,
The distant peal of a bugle's repose
That all is well and within the fold.
Well with thee, O, J.F.K.

VI
I can see the rays of an eternal
torch aglow
Over the head of a grave on a
distant row,
The stern erect form of a military
lad
Signaling to all that the torch
has been passed,
In memory of thee, O, J.F.K.

but there should be an end to them. Why let them continue throughout a performance? A performer wants to know that his audience likes him, but we should think about the fact that someone else would like to know what is happening on the stage.

The majority of the audience enjoyed the show, but there was that minority that could have enjoyed it if the college audience had conducted itself in a more appropriate manner.

Teachers Meet At E. C. S. C.

1300 teachers and other educators met to attend the 28th annual meeting of the Northeastern District of the North Carolina Teachers Association at Elizabeth City State College on Friday (November 12, 1965)

Dr. T. M. Stinnett, assistant executive secretary for Professional Development and Welfare of the National Education Association spoke at the first general session beginning at 9:45 a.m.

The speaker for the second general session scheduled for 2:45 p.m. was Dr. Ocie T. Kekle, professor of Elementary Education, University of Georgia at Athens.

The one-day program followed the theme- "Free to Teach" and was attended by principals, supervisors, and teachers of the Northeastern District, as well as officers of the State NCTA and NEA, and teachers and staff of Elizabeth City State College.

Dr. George H. Walker Jr., director of the Area of Education at the College, and a member of the executive committee of the NCTA welcomed the delegates. President Walter N. Ridley presented a special report for the District, and greetings were brought by official representatives of the NCTA and NEA State Offices. The invocation at the morning and afternoon sessions was offered by Dr. R. I. Boone, College Minister, and by the Reverend John I. Trotman, pastor of St. Stephens Church, Elizabeth City.

Dr. Stinnett was introduced by Issaac A. Battle, district director of NEA.

Dr. Stinnett also served as consultant at the meeting of the Division of Classroom Teachers from 12:15 to 1:45. Mrs. Clara E. Owens, district director presided. The speaker for the Division of Administrators and Supervisors, scheduled at the same hour, was Dr. Kekle. Mr. N. W. Slade, acting chairman presided at this meeting.

Music was provided by the College Choir directed by Miss Evelyn A. Johnson and by the College Band, under Mr. D. W. Williams.

The conference concluded with a business meeting and committee reports.
