

AN APPEAL TO THE SOCIAL SCIENCE MAJORS

To those students majoring in Social Science I direct these questions. How many news articles have you read concerning the war moratorium. How much research have you done? Plenty I am sure. Let's not forget that we are tomorrow's Sociologists, Social workers, History teachers and Social Science instructors. Bearing this in mind I am positive that you are ready for an interesting, inspiring and enlightening discussion today. Let us not take this situation lightly. As Black men and women in the Social Sciences it will definitely have an affect upon your future. I appeal to you to take part in the panel discussions and debates. This is a serious matter and as University Social Science majors it is our duty to participate. Don't take it lightly. An appeal of alertness is what I suggest. We should have more to do with this Moratorium than any other persons on campus. It is a fact that this affects us more than, any one else. So let's get in the "Groove!" Social Science majors.

Help to make the results of our moratorium ones which will move this crisis toward some end.

Robert Ward