Algood joins faculty

Dr. B. Dexter Algood joined the ECSU faculty at the beginning of the spring 1987 semester. A native of Petersburg, Virginia, Algood comes to ECSU from City College of New York where he has taught for the last four years. Algood's primary responsibility in his position is to coordinate the addition of a recording studio to the music department. However, he will also be responsible for several classes. Allgood, who completed his undergraduate studies at Virginia State University, his masters work at the University of Minnesota, and his doctorate requirements at New York University, says he finds ECSU a "pleasant change from the hustle and bustle of New York," and is excited about the new recording studio for the university.

"I feel there is a tremendous need for on-site training of students in this field and very few universities offer this training. ECSU will be set apart from the others in the training."

Turnage Recommended to National Board

Dr. Curtis D. Turnage, Chairman of the Biology Department at ECSU, has been unanimously recommended by the Extramural Associates Program Advisory Board to participate in the Extramural Associates Program at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

This program is a special adaptation of the opportunities available under the Inter-Governmental Personnel Act which promotes the participation of minorities in NIH sponsored research. During his five month visit, Turnage will become familiar with programs, mechanisms and special requirements of the NIH. Other tasks will include participation in program management, planning, review and analysis, seminars, site visits and written documents.

Turnage, born in Halifax, N.C., received his B.S. Degree in General Biology from ECSU, his M.S. from Virginia State University, and his Ph.D. from Howard University.

White appointed to State Personnel Committee

Joseph S. White, Director of Computing & Information Systems at Elizabeth City State University, was recently appointed to the Office of State Personnel Special Committee for redefining and developing job classes with career paths. He was selected from a list of 35 eligible candidates from around the state to serve on an eight-member team. His research, analysis, and recommendation will be related primarily to small and medium sized universities. Other members on the committee will be involved with specialized job classes and career paths for state hospitals, the Department of Transportation, the Department of Community Colleges, and other state agencies.
