COLLEGE DEAN GIVES HIS IDEAS ON EDUCATION

By Lillian Brown

Winston-Salem State will provide good sound education for all individuals with appropriate efficiencies in development for the year 1963-64, said Dr. George Hall, dean of instruction, recently in an interview.

Hall stated, "Every student enrolled at Winston-Salem State will be required to get assignments out on time and to attend classes regularly.

"Students will have to be more business-like to meet the demands of today. The demands of time require that the quality of education must be improved in order for Negroes as students to compete effectively in a society where there is integration."

He said, "Some changes are to be made next term to meet these demands. More emphasis is to be placed on content and an expansion of the liberal arts program which will be initiated for the interest of quality education for all next year. He also stated that he did not know the direction it would expand."

Hall noted the following additions:

1. American Literature
2. A Course in Reading

American Literature will inform students of the contribution of American writers to the field of literature. This reading course will enable students to teach reading and to comprehend what is read more effectively.

To answer the question, "Has the college been accredited yet?" Hall said no definite decision had been made, but the college will inform the public when a decision is reached.

Driver Education Workshop Conducted

By Betty Peguese

The three weeks driver education workshop that was held at Winston-Salem State College June 10-July 5 attracted several in-service teachers and students who are interested in teaching driver education in public schools.

The driver education workshop is designed to prepare teachers who are experienced drivers to conduct courses in driver education in the public schools. C. E. Gaines is the in-

W-S State Offers Workshops For Summer Session

By Obie Armstrong

Workshops are designed in order that a person can get practical experience in doing what he learns, and to make theory practical, said Dr. Charlie B. Hauser, director of summer school at Winston-Salem State College.

There are special offerings in workshops, Audio-Visual Aids, Music, workshop for sponsors of school and community papers, Driver Education and Alcoholic Studies have been offered. Marriage and Family workshop is to be offered the last three weeks of summer school.

There are consultants from various colleges and people in specialized fields of work and materials needed to carry out the workshops. There is an extra fee of $5 paid in order that one can participate.

There are five purposes which attract summer school students:

1. The college students who desire to remove irregularities or shorten the time necessary to earn a degree in this or other schools.

2. Former students who now find it possible to continue their education toward a degree or for self-improvement.

3. Former teachers and teachers in service who desire to earn hours to renew or change certificates.

4. Teachers in service who desire to upgrade and bring up-to-date their knowledge of subject matter.
5. High school and college students who wish to develop and improve skills needed to do effective college work.

Art, Education, Psychology, English, Health and Physical Education, Mathematics, Music, Science, Social Science and Nursing are among the other courses offered here in summer school.

Old Dormitory To Be Remodeled

By Charles Lassiter

The rising junior women of the Winston-Salem State College are awaiting the opening of the Pegram Hall Dormitory. This dormitory is being remodeled with up-to-date facilities. The interior of the building will be of a modern design. Every room is being rewired for lamps on the wall and over the beds.

In the basement there will be a laundry room which will consist of several washing machines and dryers. The cost of washing clothes will be about 20 or 25 cents. Each room will have new furniture such as new desks and chairs.

Pegram will have a new call system where by the girl on desk will call over the loud speaker system the person's name. Under the old system a girl would ring a code of shorts and longs or would have somebody go up to a certain floor and holler for the person wanted. This new system will eliminate this.

The entire building will be painted. New tile will be placed on each floor.

Miss C. B. Moore Is Honored At Buffet

By Gloria Harrison

A smiling Miss C. Beatrice Moore was honored at a buffet supper in the Kennedy Dining Hall Sunday evening, June 30.

More than 120 friends and co-workers paid tribute to Miss Moore for her 40 years of service to the Winston-Salem State College. They brought her awards, gifts and words of praise. This was Miss Moore's hour.

Miss Moore is from Clarkton, N. C. She is a graduate of Slater Normal School, which is known to us as Winston-Salem State College.

After having finished Slater Normal School, Miss Moore was called back to act as assistant dormitory matron. After two years she became head dormitory matron. Miss Moore enjoyed working with girls.

After serving as head matron of the dormitories, she was invited to serve as dietitian in 1933. She rendered service as dietitian 30 years.

Miss Moore's plans for the future are housekeeping, traveling and civic work.

A number of friends and co-workers honored Miss Moore.

The program opened with Dr. George A. Hall, dean of the college, as toastmaster. Invocation was given by Elder William R. Willis, a co-worker. Miss Dollye Kendall, secretary of the Student Council, spoke on behalf of the student body. She presented Miss Moore a corsage.

Remarks were given by Dr. Francis L. Atkins, retired president, James Banks, a classmate of Miss Moore, Dr. David R. Hedgley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, her church; Clark

Illiteracy Causes Unemployment Dr. Edward W. Brice Said

By Delores Scales

"The cause of education lies in the hands of the teacher," said Dr. Edward Warner Brice in an address at Winston-Salem State College, yesterday. He further expressed his views on educational deficiencies, social attitudes, and the upgrading of education. Dr. Brice is the United States Director of Adult Education.

Dr. C. B. Hauser, director of summer school, introduced the speaker and remarked that he is a native North Carolinian, teacher, author and a dynamic speaker.

"More young people face unemployment today because they have not received an adequate education," said Dr. Brice. He indicated the need for more high school and college graduates because this is an age of technology and advanced automation.

Dr. Brice cited national statistics which showed the rate of school drop-outs and the increasing number of illiterate Americans who face unemployment. Figures showed that the rates for the non-white population are greater than the white population. "It is a national tragedy for such a loss of talent each year," he said.

"Policy making boards should be integrated immediately to set the forces of education in motion for the real significant change in education," said Dr. Brice. He told his audience that educational organizations, such as NEA and ATA should think anew of their own educational goals. "Our national policies regarding education should be upheld if our democratic way of life is to be preserved, he said. "The general public must be informed of the educational opportunities and the challenging task of education."

In order to make the teaching profession attractive to the younger generation, he said. "State and local officials need to adopt better attitudes toward education. These changes could
