Scholars Needed, New Counselor Dr. Williams Says Gives Her Ideas

Carolyn Reeves

Dr. Kenneth R. Williams, president of the Winston-Salem State College, stated to the journalism class that the role of a college student was not just to get a college degree but to become a scholar.

The president said, "There is a difference between a college graduate and a scholar." "Not all students or graduates are scholars." "A scholar is one who has mastered the broad concepts to broad living."

He also stated that a scholar is one who reads good books, and keeps up with current events. "A scholar should contribute to the field of learning; he should master a field so well that he can contribute," he said.

"A scholar is concerned about his college and plays an important role in his community. He is one that is aware of his responsibilities."

"A college graduate knows a little about a lot of things and nothing about everything," stated the president. He stated that integration may mean a loss of Negro teachers. He said also that Winston-Salem State College has had much success with its graduates and there isn't a state where its graduates aren't able to get jobs. "Our graduates are short on Ph.D degrees," stated the president.

When asked about quality education, Williams said that all education is quality education. He said that this type of education was based on fundamentals that equip the individual for a useful life, a productive life and develops in him or her an awareness that goes to make good manhood or womanhood.

The curriculum at Winston-Salem State College is good enough for one to get a good teacher education because for the last two years the staff has worked on the college curriculum.

"Guidance is a very pervasive thing, and everybody who works with students can contribute to a successful program of student guidance and welfare because everybody has a unique contribution to make," Mrs. Christine K. Hedgley, Director of Guidance and Student Welfare of Winston-Salem State College, stated in a recent interview.

Mrs. Hedgley's talk centered around her job here, in relation to the guidance of the students. She stated that her job consists of co-ordinating work of two deans and working with students individually and in groups, wherever the needs indicate. "I also work with faculty groups, but my main duty is that of working with the students," Mrs. Hedgley stated.

She tries to help the students get adjusted to college life here at State College, help them to know what they are best fitted for and tries to help them with little problems which might develop.

Mrs. Hedgley stated that most of the students who come to her do not come to her with personal problems, or problems in relation to their studies. "Most of them are not problems, just miscellaneous things. They come when they have good news to share or just desire to talk to someone," Mrs. Hedgley exclaimed. She stated that there is no problem in getting the students to avail themselves to her services. "They come readily." Some come because they are referred by others and some refer themselves," Mrs. Hedgley stated.

Mrs. Hedgley said that everybody has a unique contribution that he can make to the guidance of the students here. The janitor, teachers, and everybody who works with the students can help to make this program a more successful one.

Future Plans For Library Being Made

Lorena M. Grier

"The library at Winston-Salem State College is greatly overcrowded; seating only 25% of the student body," Mrs. Lucy H. Bradshaw, the librarian stated in an interview. The librarian feels that the demands placed on the library enrollment create a need for additional staff members.

The library resources are growing so rapidly that an additional stack area was recently acquired because of the lack of available shelf space, however, it gives only temporary relief stated, Mrs. Bradshaw.

The librarian feels that the library has a well-rounded collection of books and periodicals being over 50,000. These books and periodicals, she stated, serve the needs of the students and the faculty. Mrs. Bradshaw also stated that "with the change in the curriculum, there will have to be an increase in the number of books in subject areas, and more current books and periodicals will have to be ordered."

The library Statistical Information is as follows:

Total number of books (bound) in the library as of June 30, 1963, 52,060; total number of books added 1962-63, 3,101; magazines taken regularly, 275, and number of newspapers taken regularly: daily newspapers, 7, and weekly newspapers, 12.

Mrs. Bradshaw stated that Winston-Salem State College needs a new library for many reasons. The library needs additional work areas. The arrangement and the design of the library presents a supervision problem. The children's room and the curriculum material center need a larger area. The reserve room and the reference room need to be larger, and the library needs a room to display various materials.

The college has been granted $295,000 for a new library. Mrs. Bradshaw stated that according to the plans for expansion, the library will be located across the street from the Administration Building. The library will have all new furniture that will meet up to the library standards. The librarian stated that if the new library has an open stack, it would have to depend upon the help of the students to keep it that way.

Future plans for the new library will go into effect within the next 24 or 30 months.

Coming Events

On Dec. 20, 1963, Christmas recess begins. It ends on Jan. 6, 1964. Upon our return from the Christmas holidays we will be preparing for the final examinations which will be from Jan. 17-22. At the end of the final examinations, semester break will begin. This lasts from Jan. 22-29.

Registration for the second semester is taking a new form next year. All freshmen and new

Women's Week Plans Are Told

Syvilla Thompson

"New objectives are being added to Women's Week," Mrs. Iola Dobson, Dean of Women at Winston-Salem State College said recently in an interview.

Winston-Salem State College will present its second annual "Women's Week" this year.

"The same pattern will be followed this year as last year, except a few changes will be made," she said. "The girls with 'B' averages and above will be recognized." The annual Women's Week will be held during March instead of February. The officers of Women's Week are the officers of each dormitory and the officers of the Day Students' Organization.

There is less trouble with the campus girls since new privileges have been granted," Mrs. Dobson said.

Humphrey Is New Dean of Men

Mr. Jefferson L. Humphrey, Dean of Men at Winston-Salem State College said, "If we want to be thrown into the mainstream of American life as citizens of the United States, we must, here at State College, be first class aspirants and perpetuators of first class standards and ideas," in a recent interview.

In order to make his program successful he is asking all male students of State College to:

1. Realize where they are and what they are trying to do;
2. Make the most of every person and faculty here at the college, and
3. Co-ordinate, integrate, and correlate all opportunities and experiences with the idea that their work might take them anywhere on the face of the earth of the heavens surrounding it.

Some of Humphrey's duties as Dean of Men at State College are: he confers with the president and other college officials on matters; serves as general advisor to students; co-operates with Deans of Registrar in all academic matters; keeps personal records of each student and furnishes records when requested.

Works to provide programs of educational, recreation and social values to resident students, and works cooperatively with faculty committee on discipline.

Mr. Humphrey is a native of Winston-Salem, N. C. and a product of the public schools of Winston-Salem. He is a graduate of Winston-Salem State College, and New York University.
