Line Time Brings New Members To Campus Greeks

Line time arrived on campus just before the Christmas holiday break. Eight Greek letter organizations, four fraternities and four sororities, initiated new members during this period.

Pictures of the neophytes of six of these groups appear in this issue. New members of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity are shown on page 1. On page six you may see pictures of neophytes of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority and Delta Sigma Theta sorority.

Pictures of new Greeks in three groups, Zeta Phi Beta sorority, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and Omega Psi Phi fraternity, are displayed on page 7.

GREEK LETTER

Throughout American college history a traditional group on campus has been the Greek letter organization.

Originally, they reflected intellectual achievement. A few such as Alpha Kappa Mu and Phi Beta Kappa still do. Others represent societies in various professions.

The traditional, old line Greek letter organization, however, now is a social organization. It emphasizes a certain amount of scholarship for eligibility, but otherwise concentrates on social activity.

Eight of these groups are active on this campus. These sororities appeal to the young ladies on campus:

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, Delta Sigma Theta sorority, Sigma Gamma Rho sorority and Zeta Phi Beta sorority.

Fraternities appealing to the young men on campus are:

Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, Phi Beta Sigma fraternity, and Omega Psi Phi fraternity.

All eight groups are members of the Pan-Hellenic Council on campus. This group is designed to coordinate the activities of the Greek letter societies and to set high standards for their operation on campus.

On many campuses, the Greek letter groups are very powerful. A student must be a Greek to win any important campus office. Barbarians are part of the out group.

This is not true on this campus. Greek letter organizations have flourished on this campus only since World War I, and they have never come close to attracting even a large percentage of the students here. Kappa Alpha Psi has not been on campus five years yet.

Unlike most college organizations, Greek letter groups may blackball a prospective member on the vote of one member or a very small minority. As a result, many students consider them snobbish.

How valuable are fraternities and sororities? What values do they promote? The next issue of this paper will give a neophyte's view of one Greek letter group.

Farmer To Speak
James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, will speak on campus at 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 6 at the regular vesper service at Fries Auditorium.

His address will open the celebration of Negro History Week on campus. His topic will be "The New Birth of Freedom for the American Negro."

The Student Activities Committee is sponsoring Farmer's appearance at State. His talk is a feature of the committee's lecture-film series.

Farmer was a founder of CORE in Chicago, Ill. in 1942. CORE believes in non-violent demonstrations and activities to win first class citizenship for Negroes. Farmer has worked as a union leader and a radio and television commentator.

He is a graduate of Wiley College with a B.S. degree in chemistry and of Howard University with a B.D. degree in religion.

Farmer recently resigned his position with CORE to accept a position as president of the newly formed non-profit Center for Community Education, Inc. He will leave CORE March 1.

The new Center is designed to reduce illiteracy among Negroes and other minority groups in the United States.

This will be Farmer's first appearance at State.

Lewis Is Coming
Another national civil rights leader, John Lewis of Atlanta, Ga., is coming to campus this week. He is national chairman of SNCC, Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, commonly called Snick.

His appearance is sponsored by the Student Council. Arthur Gray, Student Council president, said he was not sure of the exact date of Lewis' address.

Students Investigate Stealing or the particular group. The particular measures that a teacher employs are not nearly so decisive as is the manner in which he approaches the problem.

The teacher must carefully study the psychological factors that are the root of the problems of stealing or the stealing of property from an individual or a corporation. The study of the child's potentials, weaknesses, strengths, motivations, opportunities and frustrations will aid the teacher in the teaching of the attitudes toward personal and corporation property.

The teacher's own attitudes will determine to a great extent the measure which will be taken regarding stealing.

The C.L.C. Society was recently organized by 38 ladies residing in Colson Hall who previously were members of the National Honor Society in their respective high schools. This Citizenship, Leadership, and Character Society has adopted as its motto, "Not At The Top But Still Climbing," and as their colors, black and gold.

To promote better citizenship, leadership, and character, this society plans to sponsor various activities during this academic school year.

Officers are: President, Miss Dorothy Coleman; Vice-President, Miss Minnie Brewington; Secretary, Miss Katie Dillahunt; Assistant Secretary, Miss Beatrice Burton; and Treasurer, Miss Mary Petty.

Other members include Misses Maggie Whitt, Olga Davis, Mary Taylor, Loretta Best, Barbara Bass, and Carolyn Williams.

Class of 1969 Elects Officers

The Freshman Class of WSSC elected officers Nov. 29, 1965 after the Thanksgiving vacation.

Only a small number of members of the class was present to welcome and vote for their officers.

The class is headed by an enthusiastic president, Allen Williams of New York City, sometimes referred to as "Big Al" or "Martin Luther." Al promised to enlist the support of every registered freshman.

"Only in this way will our class become a spot on the map," he said.

George Ledbetter of Winston-Salem is a vice president. Other officers elected were Robert Houston, vice president, of Fort Bragg, N. C.; Barbara Kelly, secretary, of Laurinburg, N. C.; Nellie Banks, assistant secretary, a nursing student from Pollocksville, N. C.; Wesley Steele, parliamentarian and class reporter, of Chicago, Ill.; Gary Burnett, treasurer, of Graham, N. C.; and Larry Butler, sergeant-at-arms, of Winston-Salem.

All officers are pragmatic in their discussion of future plans for the class. They hope their program will win the support of their classmates.
