

GEORGE C. NEWELL, NEW DEAN OF MEN, EXPRESSES IDEAS

The new Dean of Men of the Winston-Salem State College is Mr. George C. Newell, native of Bladen County in North Carolina. The new dean is also Associate Professor of Science and a Physical Science teacher at this institute.

"I enjoy my work which is quite challenging; the young men and faculty were most cordial in helping me become adjusted to my new work," reveals Mr. Newell. "We are always open for suggestions to improve the general welfare of our students."

To further commend the young men of this campus, he said that he has been well pleased with the improvement the young men have made in improving the physical environment of Bickett hall.

Having been asked if there were any additional improvements which should be made within the school, he, not prepared to give too many negative views at this early time, directed his response at the students.

"The pendulum is swinging a little too far on the social side and not on the academic," he said. "Students need to apply themselves more studiously and have ever in mind to strive to bring their grades up where they'll be a credit to themselves and their college."

He feels that the students of WSSC should realize that they reflect this college as well as their race.

Prior to coming to WSSC, Dean Newell was Dean of Men at Ligon High School in Raleigh, N. C.

A graduate of the Fayetteville State Normal, Fayetteville, N. C., the one-time teacher of mathematics and science received his B.S. from Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N. C.; and his M.S. from the Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind. He was valedictorian of his high school and college classes.

Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio; North Carolina State University, at Raleigh, N. C.; North Carolina College, Durham, N. C. are only a few schools where he further studied.

For the most part his teaching experiences have been within the boundaries of North Carolina.

His participation in organizations ranges from Charitable Organizations, Sunday School teacher and Y.M.C.A. to Educational Associations, the NAACP and various offices within the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.

Mr. Newell is married to Virginia Kimbrough, a native of this city, and presently a mathematics teacher at this school; he has two daughters, Virginia De Anne and Glenda Felicia.

Library Students Attend Conference

During the week of November 4-6, 1965 the North Carolina Library Association held its biennial conference at the Robert E. Lee Hotel, Winston-Salem, N. C. As members of the Library Science classes, under the auspices of Mrs. Nell B. Wright, we were given the opportunity to attend the conference.

On the first day of the convention, registration was held and exhibits were shown from various companies of library materials and book publishers. From the various exhibits displayed by publishers and companies, we were able to observe the new books and materials that were recommended for selection in school libraries. Each exhibit had pamphlets and catalogs concerning its displays which would be helpful in the selection of books and materials for purchase. There were also people available to answer questions.

There were various meetings which were designed for the improvement of libraries in North Carolina. At the luncheons, several prominent personalities in library service spoke.

Discussed topics were: "Library Development in Smaller Colleges," "Automation" and "The Writer as Organization Man." The latest proposed developments for libraries were discussed by Federal and state representatives.

The most exciting moment at the convention was hearing Mrs. Frances Gray Patton, author of Good Morning Miss Dove. There were many lasting impressions made on the students attending the conference.

Catherine Thompson said, "Attending the NCLA provided a very wholesome, educational and interesting experience for me."

Annie Bailey stated, "From this experience I became aware of the closeness of the school libraries to the students as well as the teachers."

Patricia Mock stated, "It was a rare experience for me to see face to face, an author of today and I shall never forget it."

Dorothy Shade said, "The convention gave me a profound idea of how to select the best books from the best publisher."

Rumor Has It . . . or Comment On Variety of Subjects

That all the students of WSSC are not treated fair, causing much discontentment around campus.

Have You Heard?

About the dormitory matron who locked the dorm before all students departing for the Thanksgiving holidays were ready to leave.

Rumor has it that the students were standing outside the dorm loaded with books and luggage until the hour of their departure. What's going to happen next?

About the hole in the corner which takes part of your money before you can get it.

Rumor has it that this office is charging what seems like a small amount from the checks or money orders, fifteen cents. Don't they know every cent counts?

About the way the students are treated in the dining hall, not to mention the way they are fed.

Rumor has it that many of the students, particularly the males, are being constantly picked on by certain hired hands. What are we going to do about this?

Gwendolyn Patterson said, "The convention was a privilege and a unique experience to come in contact with people from various occupations and professions; especially from those that will influence me in the future."

Daisy Rogers stated, "This was one of the most learned experiences I've encountered. It was the type of experience that I wish all students could have."

Darlena Marshall said, "This was an opportunity to examine the books themselves as well as meeting the representatives of various publishers."

These are the comments made by the students in the Library Science classes about the convention. In general, the meeting was very interesting and beneficial to all persons attending.

Sophomore Class

Continuing the theme, "Excellence without Excuse, Jefferson L. Humphrey, the Sophomore Class has sponsored a variety of activities this year.

Under this program, members of the class of 1968 have been active in two-thirds of the campus programs. These include football, basketball, the band, the choir and various organizations.

As freshmen Annie D. Van was Miss Ram and Rita Alston was Miss SNEA. Magdalene McDougald was an attendant to Miss Winston-Salem State.

William Rice became class advisor during its sophomore year. The class float won second place in the homecoming parade. Miss Alston repeated as Miss SNEA. "If the sophomore class wins this title as juniors next year, the class will receive a plaque," the Rev. Henry S. Lewis has been quoted as saying. Attendees were Quilla Montgomery to Miss WSSC and Gloria Jean Tyson to Miss Ram.

The class is looking forward to a successful sophomore-freshman ball in the spring.

Speaking for the class, Joseph Askew, president, said:

"We shall diligently continue to seek to live up to our theme, 'Excellence without Excuse,' during our sophomore year. In all our endeavors, our theme will be our guiding star to harmony and success."
