

LaVerne Whitted displays pride in her African heritage with an "Afro" hair do.

LaVerne Whitted Sports the 'Afro'

In today's world of style, the tendency seems to be the "natural look." One particular phase of the new look is the natural hair-do. This style has been worn quite frequently by Negro boys and men for some time, but now, the style-conscious Negro girls are getting into the act.

One young lady on campus, Miss LaVerne Whitted, a rising junior from New York, commented that she wears a "natural" simply because "I like the style."

"I have been wearing my hair this way since the last part of April," Miss Whitted stated. "The only people who have actually expressed disapproval of the style are some members of my family."

Miss Whitted feels that the "natural" belongs to the black people. She feels that it shows the world that, although she is not rebelling against society, she is not conforming to the white man's ways and the white man's conception of beauty.

The coed said that when she walks on the streets, people turn and stare at her. She has prepared herself for this because she proudly stares back, she said.

She feels that many Negroes are prejudiced even within their own race and are ashamed of their black brothers who exhibit the true qualities of a Negro.

When asked whether she could tell if people disapproved of her hairstyle simply by the way they look at her, she replied that she could not; however, quite a few strangers tell her that they like it.

When asked what she thinks of Twiggy, who to some extent, represents almost opposing sides of beauty, Miss Whitted commented, "I think that Twiggy is attractive in her own way."

Head Majorette Enjoys Prancing

Miss Linda Phillips becomes head majorette at Winston-Salem State College for the fall. This is the second time that Miss Phillips has been selected to serve as head majorette. During her high school days she led the Paisley High School Marching 100 for two years.

Miss Phillips, a Physical Education major and Sociology minor, has been a majorette for nine years. She got her start as a junior majorette for the Kimberley Park Recreation Center.

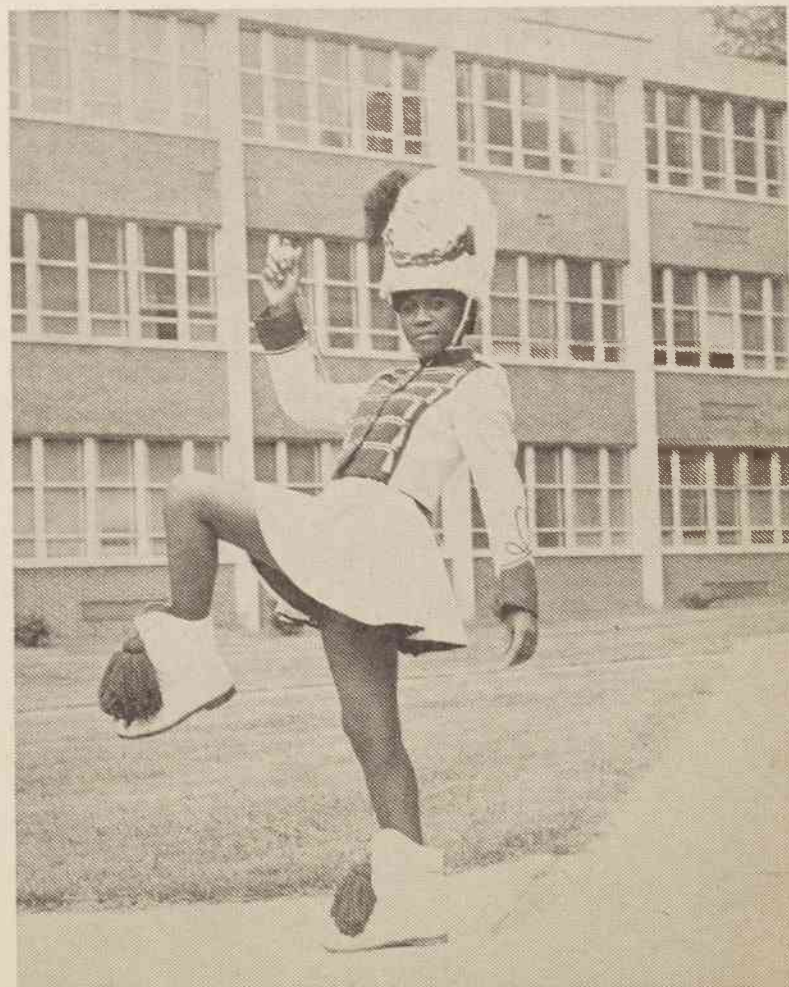

"There is a difference in being the head majorette of a high school band and being one of a college band," said Miss Phillips. "In high school the head majorettes take the responsibility of teaching steps and routines, but in college all the majorettes take the responsibility."

Miss Phillips, who plays a baritone horn after marching season is over, gives her older sister, Sandra, credit for teaching her everything she knows.

"I take great pride in working with our band, mainly because of the devotion shown by the members and by our director, Mr. Pickard," said Miss Phillips.

Miss Phillips is a member of the P Phi E Club and her major interests are dancing, swimming, reading, and listening to jazz. After graduation she would like to teach in Detroit, Michigan.
