

Editor Plans Trip to Europe

By Ronald Jordan

Marilyn L. Roseboro, a senior English major and editor of The News Argus, will leave the United States on Jan. 2 for a month-long tour of London, England.

The trip, which is being funded by the R. J. Reynolds Scholastic Achievement Program, is part of the Literary Study Tour at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory.

Marilyn will be among 26 students who will be making the trip as part of the one-month interim between semesters at Lenoir-Rhyne College. The college is on a 4-1-4 system which enables students to take off from school for one month to work on special projects.

The trips, which cost around $600, are paid for by the students. Twenty-two students making the trip are students of Lenoir-Rhyne and the others are from various colleges.

Marilyn was awarded the trip after making application and writing a paper explaining why she wanted to go to London and what she expected to gain from the trip.

All junior or senior Reynolds scholars at Winston-Salem State were eligible for the trip and the final decision was made by the Reynolds advisory board.

Marilyn said she was surprised that she was selected and expressed excitement about the trip. "It'll really be a welcomed change," she said. "It'll be a real experience seeing things first hand that I've only read about or seen on postcards."

John Merson, director of the interim program at Lenoir-Rhyne, explained that the students will be serving two purposes while on the trip. They will be traveling in the British Isles and working on a special education project.

They will have a chance to visit some of the homes, working places and settings of a lot of great British literary personalities, Merson said. They will visit places where Shakespeare worked and wrote.

The students will visit several sites including Scotland Yard, Parliament, Westminster Abbey, Hyde Park, Big Ben and Buckingham Palace where they will see the famous Changing of the Guard.

The students will be accompanied by four chaperones, two Lenoir-Rhyne professors and two people from the community. They will leave from the Greensboro Airport on Jan. 2 and return on Jan. 30.

Marilyn, 21, is from Charlotte. At Winston-Salem State aside from her duties as editor of The News Argus, she is affiliated with the Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc., and is a member of Alpha Kappa Mu Honor Society.

She is corresponding secretary of the English Club (SOLA) and copy editor of the yearbook staff.

She has been listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities and the National Student Register and received the English Award for 1972.

Upon graduation she wants to either enter a graduate school of journalism or says she would like to study television news broadcasting.

MISS ROSEBORO — EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF NEWS ARGUS

The News Argus.

VOL. X, NO. 4

WINSTON-SALEM STATE UNIVERSITY

DECEMBER, 1972

Chancellor Williams Speaks To Students

May I thank all of you for the marvelous cooperation you have given as this academic term has progressed. It is difficult to realize that one-half of the term has passed.

The big question in the minds of all of us at the beginning of the term was, what will the reorganization of higher education in North Carolina mean for Winston-Salem State University? It is too early to answer that question. It can be said, however, that nothing, as of this date, suggests that the fears expressed were justified. Everyone, from the Board of Governors to interested private citizens, has expressed interest in the forward progress of Winston-Salem State University. The recommendations to be presented to the 1973 General Assembly for funds are quite favorable to our institution.

You have been patient with some inconveniences caused by the removal of all overhead wiring and placing of all campus wires underground. This project is scheduled to be completed in January, 1973. Contracts have been signed for the complete renovation of the heating system. This project will be delayed to some extent since much of the work cannot be done while the heating system is in operation. We are to convert the boiler system to oil and thereby eliminate a major problem with pollution.

It was thought that the new auditorium would be under construction by this time. Final plans are under review, and we have reasons to believe that this project should be out for bids soon.

Efforts are being put forth by many people to provide additional opportunities for Winston-Salem State students. The visible signs of these efforts, such as capital improvement projects, represent only one phase of all that is being done. The curriculum is under constant review, new funds are being sought to strengthen and improve the educational opportunities of students, and members of our faculty are pursuing advanced studies in all fields covered by our course offerings.

This brief report to you does not cover, by any means, all of the exciting things that are going on at Winston-Salem State. Other statements will follow from time to time so that you will be fully informed. Your suggestions for improvements will be appreciated.

Happy Holidays!

New Organization To Aid Students

A new religious organization called the W.S.S.U. Ministerial Association and Associates was recently formed on campus. The group was formed to be of aid to confused and troubled students.

The officers are: Howard Parker, president, Francis Mann, vice president, Benjamin Tandy, secretary, Dwight Hash, chaplain, and Calvin Banks, reporter. Members are ministers and associates interested in some field of Christian Education studies.

The organization is currently planning to make use of the chapel in the Student Union building, having daily devotion services in the morning and afternoon. Also, there will be an order-of-the-day on selected dates when one of the student ministers will deliver the sermon. In addition, the Ministerial Association plans to visit theological seminaries and other institutions specializing in religion.

The Association meets every Wednesday at 10 o'clock in the seminar room of the library. Its meetings are open to all interested persons.

Chancellor Williams encourages students concerning opportunities the administration seeks to improve.

To Answer Questions

Job Counselor-Specialist To Appear On Campus

Harrisburg, Pa. — A Pennsylvania State Civil Service Commission representative will be on campus at Winston-Salem State University Thursday, January 18, to rap with seniors about career opportunities in Pennsylvania State government and to hold tests for positions in several fields.

Veter J. Thomas, job-counseling specialist from the Commission's recruitment office, will answer questions on salaries, job requirements, working conditions and employee benefits. Rap Sessions will be held both morning and afternoon. Consult the college placement office for time and place.

A two and one-half hour written test will be held in the afternoon for students enrolled in the following curricula. Education, Nursing, Business Administration, English, Mathematics, Sociology and History.

Students interested in taking the test

Black College Presidents Urged To "Speak Out"

Black brothers are getting wasted! Man, what a waste!

The events which occurred on the campus of Southern University last month can not be explained or reasoned away by any commission. Instead, causes should be sought in an examination of a system which finds it necessary to send armed guards to a university campus. Surely, there are better ways. It seems that the people wasted are generally innocent bystanders and generally black.

To date, Dr. James Cheeks, Howard University president, has spoken out most strongly (of college presidents) against the events which transpired at Southern. A united effort by black college/university presidents would make a great impression on those public officials who are so quick to summon the National Guard. Many presidents probably feel they'd jeopardize their positions. On the contrary, we contend that in the afternoons must participate in one of the earlier sessions. Further information on the State Civil Service Commission's recruitment presentation may be obtained from the college placement office.

(Continued on Page Three)