Beta Kappa Chi

Beta Kappa Chi, a relatively new Organization on the Winston-Salem State University campus, held its second annual induction ceremonies February 6th. The ceremonial proceedings took place at 6:00 P.M. in the Hauser Student Union ballroom.

Beta Kappa Chi is the National Scientific Honor Society and strives for the advancement of scientific knowledge, for accuracy in scientific research, and for proper dissemination of scientific information gained through research.

The initial part of the induction ceremonies consisted of a secret ritual through which all new inductees must pass. After the ritual had taken place, the inductees were sworn in and were allowed to shake the hands of old members of the organization.

The new inductees were biology majors Patricia Fennell, David Gaston, John Lee, and Edith Parrish. Math majors inducted were Henrietta Howard, and Sylvia Johnson. Old members of the organization included Dr. Jacqueline Shepperson, Ms. L. Oliver, Dr. Nathan Simms, Dr. Sandra Kerr, Mr. Jordan, Mr. Terrell, Mrs. Williams, Harrison Sturdivant, and Blonnie Yancey. Officers for the organization are president Sharon Thompson, vice-president James Moore, secretary-treasurer Patricia Smith, and reporter William Ardrey.

A dinner was served to all of the members following the induction ceremonies. Fried chicken was featured, and German chocolate cake was served for dessert. A brief history of the Beta Kappa Chi organization was given by James Moore following the dinner.

Political Science

The Political Science Club is sponsoring a week of educational, political activities that will be geared towards informing the community about various agencies and their roles. "Community Involvement Week" began on March 10 and will continue through March 14. Monday's program was on Experiment in Self-Reliance with Mrs. Gladys Wilson and Ms. Evelyn Terry as representatives. Tuesday's program is on Social Security and the Elderly. Wednesday, discussion will be centered around the Veteran's Administration. Do you know your rights? On Thursday, the representatives from the Legal Aid Society will answer this question as well as others in this program. Friday, the role of the Black Panther Party Free Ambulance Service will be discussed by speaker Charles Zollicoffer, former SGA president here at State. The club invites the community as well as other public agencies and groups to attend. It will prove to be very informative.

Women in Law

Women in Law at Wake Forest University School of Law is sponsoring a career weekend March 21-23, 1975 in Winston-Salem for any women interested in attending law school. Registration is open to anyone, not just college seniors.

Activities for the weekend will include attending some classes, social events where women can talk informally with attorneys, seminars on women's experience as students and as practicing attorneys, explanation of admission procedures, and opportunity for small group discussion. Housing will be provided if needed.

Information is available at the Placement Office at your school, or contact: Women in Law, Wake Forest Law School, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27109.

SNCAE

The Student North Carolina Association of Educators is very much alive at WSSU.

SNCAE, the club for teaching majors, is found at most colleges in North Carolina. The clubs are divided into different clusters. Winston-Salem State is in cluster 5 along with High Point College, Livingstone College, Wake Forest University, Catawba College, and Salem College.

The delegate representing cluster 5 at the representative assembly in February was Miss Ann Webb, a junior here at State.

The greatest problem of the SNCAE is membership. At this time there are about forty members. All teaching majors are eligible to join, and the SNCAE welcomes any other persons to join.
