Madrigals at Reynolda House

The Winston-Salem State Madrigal Singers made their first appearance of the school year Tuesday, November 9 at Reynolda House. Reynolda House is Winston-Salem's largest mansion and was formally owned by Tobacco Industry millionaire R.J. Reynolds. It was later doanted to Wake Forest University by the Reynolds family.

The Madrigals directed by Dr. Lee M. Beall consists of eight soprano's and alto's four tenor's, and six bass singers. The evening began with a wonderful rendition of "America" which was masterfully arranged, directed, and accompanied by Dr. Beall. The group slipped right into the next selection "America The Beautiful."

The group reached a peak in the performance with a spiritually touching version of "I Have A Dream" and thoroughly captured the attention of the audience. At this point one had to be thoroughly impressed with this group of singers. As the group prepared to sing "Now Spring In All Her Glory," Dr. Beall explained that Madrigals are all about spring, happiness, and love.

Cassandra Scales one of the group's soprano's did the only solo number entitled, "Moving On". The group also sang "Feelings" which Dr. Beall considers one of their most popular numbers. The last selection was the "Little Old Lady in Tennis Shoes" and it put the group into a finger popping mood. Then Dr. Beall cut into a tune similar to a jitterbug on the piano and with that the performance was concluded.

As I talked with Dr. Beall, he expressed the need for music students at WSSU to get experience in music literature and this is the basic purpose for formulating such a group. He was quite excited about the free use of Reynolda House and a little upset that more students or faculty & staff did not attend.

If you have the opportunity to see the Madrigal Singers perform please don't miss it.

Running from the Devil - Part II

The Devil Has A Plan

I started out with patience
But as I stalled for time,
That two-faced dirty lier
Tried to make me change my mind
As I was getting ready,
The Devil spoke to me,
He laughed and said with terror,
"I'll get you wait and see!"
The night was dark and gloomy,
It seemed I could not sleep,
I started to hear noises
Or voices from the deep.
The devil with his slyness
Tried to make me feel remorse
But as I cried out "JESUS"
The Devil's voice grew hoarse!
I could not find my Bible,
But Jesus shined his light.
I smiled and said with courage,

I won't forget this night!"
Hold the Bible firmly
I could not let it go,
And then I shouted "Satan,
I'll win and this you know!"
With shouts and cries and stomps
The Devil could not see,
For even while I faced the dark,
I still had victory!
The Plan that Satan tried to use
Backfired in his face,
And now he's even more afraid
Of when we run the race.
The Devil moaned in agony
He cried with sure nough pain
"You think you'll beat me running
But I'll make you ashamed!
And then I told the Devil
"Return to yonder deep,
And practice for the race to come
Now go, and let me sleep!"
It seems his plan backfired
Now Satan's Fighting Mad,
But one thing he's forgotten,
My GOD is SUPER-BAD!

Part III. Next Edition. Preparing For the Race

The Other Half

His feet had the smell
Of a belch from Hell
His teeth were rotted
To match his black gums-
With bloodshot eyes,
They protruded with size
He saw all the world
And then some-

His hair was as nappy
As a gorilla's pappy
The sweat brought a perfume
Of death from his arms.
His knuckles had engaged
Unsuccessfully with age
Yet how well they worked
Against all harm.

He was short as could be
The old age you see,
Bad knees kept him limping
Wherever he'd go
But yet in that shell
There always will dwell
The hardworking father
We all come to know.

Joanne Glenn Attends Nat'l Meeting

Less than a fortnight before the Presidential election, a distinguished company of the nation's business, educational, and governmental leadership gathered at the Seventh Annual National Leadership Symposium. Joanne Glenn was Winston-Salem State University's participant in the symposium. Her trip was sponsored by the Scholastic Achievement Program.

This prestigious conference, jointly sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers and the Center for the Study of the Presidency, in association with the American Council on Education, convened the weekend of October 22-24, at the architectural award winning Deere & Company Administrative Center in Moline, Illinois. The overall theme of the symposium was "The Congress, the Presidency, and the Economy: A Bicentennial Appraisal."

Traditionally each year, alternating between Democrats and Republicans, the symposium includes a distinguished lecture on a former President, followed by a visit to his home and/or library. This year, "Herbert Hoover Reappraised," was delivered by Dr. Joseph E. McCabe, Chancellor, Coe College. Then the conference participants journeyed by chartered buses to the Hoover birthplace and Presidential Library in West Branch, Iowa.

This year's symposium attracted over 270 participants from all over the United States as well as from South Korea, Egypt, Israel, and Germany. Ms. Glenn found the symposium to be an extremely rewarding and information experience.

Joanne, a Reynolds Scholar, is a history major from Charlotte.

Sagittarius [Nov. 23-Dec. 20]

People born under this sign are often honest and forthright. They are broadminded, irresponsible, self-centered, and reckless. The Sagittarian enjoys sports and games, and it doesn't matter if he wins or loses. He is a forgiving person, and never sulks over something that has not worked out in his favor. The Sagittarius strong point is resilience and momentum gained through hope. They are turned on by Aries and Leo.

Some Sagittarians are restless. They take foolish risks and seldom learn from the mistakes they make. They do not know how to handle money and they are often mismanaging their finances. Sagittarius planetary ruler is Jupiter, the symbol of enthusiasm.
