

Women On The Court

Basketball

Continued from page 1
techniques, the Rams prove that they are very hard to beat. As their fans salute them for their spectacular performances, they realize that the hard work and long hours of practice was really worth their while.

Mrs. Scales, who is the coach of the team, is indeed an attribute. It is her guidance and powerful influence that mold the team. With a watchful eye, she readily accepts disappointments and willingly boosts victory! She has a certain kind of love, warmth, and consideration for her team. She knows that unity and love must be established between each player, before they can truthfully unite as a team. It is with this kind of leadership that the Rams press on with pride, dignity, and that Old Ram Spirit!

As for the students response to the girl's team, most of them feel that they are an asset to the sports program. One individual stated, "When I see the girls in action, I know that they are doing their very best. They stand for honor and pride. I am proud of the men's team, but just think, the girls are smoking too!" A freshman from Winston-Salem had this response. "I used to think that the guys were the only people who could play ball. I know now that we not only have talented guys, but we also have multi-talented girls. It makes me proud to be a woman, but more proud to be a Ram."

Because of their strong determination, pride, and ultimate commitment, there is no doubt that the Lady Rams will remain the pride of Ramland.

The Rams finished second this season in the CIAA basketball tournament in Norfolk, Virginia and as an added spark to their successful season, they were named to the All-tournament team.

From here the Rams will go on to compete in the NCAIAW Division II tournament to be held at Pembroke State College March 3-4-5.

A determined Mrs. Conley said, "We're going to take this one!" They came in third last season.

Beverly Blackwell

