

Law School Information Available

Mrs. Maurice Johnson, Pre-law Advisor, recently visited the Campbell College School of Law in Buies Creek, North Carolina and has compiled some pertinent information.

The first class consisting of ninety-three (93) students entered in the fall of 1976. The school hopes to be accredited by the time the first class graduates.

Cecil Summers, a 1976 graduate of WSSU is one of two black students in the first class. His adjustment and progress is highly commended.

Candidates for the second class are now being selected, therefore, juniors who are interested should start now making plans for the fall of 1978. Although the LSAT score must be submitted, it is not the ultimate determinant. The average score for the first class was between 565-570. More emphasis is placed on the personal interview. Characteristics that will be looked for are honesty, general intelligence, the ability to work hard and dedication. One needs to have command of the mechanical tools (especially writing) and the ability to make analytical judgements.

Interested students should consider taking courses in the following: Government, History, Economics, Accounting, Human Behavior, Philosophy and Laboratory Sciences. A major in any field is acceptable; the fine arts excluded. A prospective law student should choose electives from these areas.

This school unlike some others does give careful consideration to recommendations. They should come from individuals who can attest to the candidate's ability to withstand an extremely vigorous schedule, therefore recommendations from instructors and/or attorneys are preferred.

The campus makes up the town. It is quite spacious and an ideal place for real study.

You may secure all the necessary documents and any information from Mrs. Johnson. She can be contacted in the Enrichment Center in Carolina Hall.

Tribute To Dr. King

Memorial Week Observed

In observance of Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Week, January 9-15, the M.M. Hauser Student Union presented a memorial address by Capt. Floyd Griffin, assistant professor of military science at Wake Forest University and coordinator of ROTC Cross Enrollment at WSSU. Griffin's speech entitled, "A Perspective of a Man Who Had a Courageous Dream", outlined historical events throughout the early civil rights movement concentrating on Dr. King's endeavors and the role that he played in the civil rights movement.

The purpose of Griffin's speech was three-fold:

1) to recapitulate undertakings to those individuals who participated in the early Civil Rights struggle; 2) to give present day generation a historical overview of the struggles that Dr. King and the civil rights participants confronted during the late 50's and early 60's; 3) to leave an impact on the audience to search their souls to determine if the courageous dream of Dr. King has been conquered to motivate the audience to re-evaluate themselves in terms of where we were, where we are now and where we are going.

Quoting passages from the Bible, Griffin informed the audience that in his youth he had marched with King and had known him and all the things he stood for.

Griffin ended his address with a reminder that King's dream is still alive and it is up to us to continue the fight for freedom.

"A Trip to Atlanta", a poem written and presented by Sam Robinson set the mood for the address along with a heart chilling solo by LaVerne Grantham.

"Life Of A King - The Story of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.", a play written by Authur Langford, Jr. was presented by Langford's company of eight players on Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m. in the Kenneth R. Williams Auditorium. The play was a multi-media presentation that combined drama, music and slides to present the story of Dr. King's struggles on behalf of civil rights and human dignity.

Quoting Dr. King who said, "It isn't so important how long one lives, but how he lives," Mrs. Betty Barnes narrator of the play gave a very vivid description of the hardships and inhuman treatment Blacks received before the Civil Rights Movement as a way of introduction to each scene.

Portrayed events included the Montgomery bus boycott which was a result of the attack on Rosa Parks, a black seamstress who refused to give up her bus seat to a white man; the demonstration in Birmingham, the March on Washington and Dr. King's memorable address, "I Have A Dream"; the sanitation march in Memphis and Dr. King's final speech. These events which shaped American history are portrayed against a backdrop of slides depicting the actual events.

The play incorporated drama, music and slides to present a most dynamic reaccount of these events.
