Inaugural Dinner

Friday, September 29, 1978 proved to be quite a day on the Winston-Salem State University campus. Following the Inauguration of Chancellor H. Douglas Covington, several students joined him in the Kennedy Dining Hall at 5:00 p.m. Dr. Covington shook hands and conversed with well-wishing students and faculty members. Many people were surprised to see him. He had previously canceled an appearance at an earlier event, due to last minute schedule changes for security reasons.

A special dinner consisting of fried chicken, roast beef, potatoes, rolls, and a choice of two vegetables was served. Deserts consisted of cherry pie and sheet cake. It was attended by approximately four hundred students and faculty members. This number was far below the usual number of people served for dinner at Kennedy Dining Hall. Many students had taken the opportunity to leave town for the three-day holiday.

Guests, students, and faculty mingled together exchanging greetings as they enjoyed their meal proving it to be a gala event.

They're out to get you this year, you know. They're out to pay you back, But you'll have to show them once more. That you don't allow any slack. They're going to try and make you look bad. They'll try to show you up, But you'll show them you're better than before. And come back with the Gold Bowl Cup.

The night of September 29, 1978 highlighted a week of activities held in honor of the Inauguration of Dr. H. Covington as the sixth Chancellor of Winston-Salem State University.

Students dressed in jackets, dress shirts and lovely dresses sat at tables covered with red table cloths, decorated with softly lit red candles. Guest sported party favorites such as horns, balloons, and multi-colored butterflies. Beautiful hanging plants and soft music reflected a relaxed informal atmosphere.

The event was dinner-dance at the LaTerre XXI club sponsored by the Student government Association. William Penn-President, Tony Bellamy-Director of Social Affairs, and Troy L. Baker, Jr. were on hand to extend a warm welcome to the new Chancellor and his family.

Dr. Covington, handsome and debonair in a black suit and tie thanked the SGA and guests for making his family feel welcome to the University. He also commented on the general behavior of the student body, and expressed his deep felt opinion that the students at WSSU were some of the best behaved students that he had ever met. The Chancellor mentioned that the Governor of North Carolina had praised the students behavior during the two o'clock assembly.

In closing, he reminded everyone of his commitment to make WSSU one of the best Universities around this area. After his short informal speeches, Dr. and Mrs. Covington opened the evening for dancing with the popular tune, "Make it Funky."

Congratulations are extended from the News Argus family to the Covington family for a long and successful stay here at WSSU.

Mini Parade at 12

By Faye M. Vernon

The Day Student Association was started several years ago to give Day Students a feeling of belongingness at WSSU. The association is funded solely on membership dues and contributions. Presently they have approximately 90 members, representing less than 10% of the Day Students now enrolled at WSSU. They gladly welcome all who wish to join. Membership dues are $1.00, and you may contact any of the following DSA Officers; Karla Miller - President; Deborah Holiday - Vice President; Wanda Samuels - Treasurer; Kim Marshall - Secretary; Alycia Miller - Ms. Day Student.

Since its organization, DSA has been responsible for Red & White Day Festivities. Today at 12 noon, one of the highlights of Red & White Day/Homecoming Festivities will occur--the "Mini Parade." Several campus organizations will participate in this event. Leading off will be the Letter Carriers, followed by the Marching Rams. Then come the Cheerleaders and the children of the Early Childhood Center. Ms. Day Student and some competitive groups will form the end of the lineup.

The procession will leave from the Kenneth R. Williams Auditorium, proceed down Wallace Street past Hauser Student Union, the Chancellor's home, and the new Atkins Hall. Turning right onto Price Street, the marchers will come up the one-way street by Coltrane Hall and the Alumni Hut and turn left onto Bank Street. Going by the C.G. O'Kelly Library and Kennedy Dining Hall, the 'parade' will end at Whitaker Gymnasium where a pep rally will immediately follow.

The MC will have opening remarks to kick off the pep rally to end the Mini Parade. In addition to the brief summary of the events presented here, route maps, gym set-up, and Red & White Day Programs have been distributed to all participating groups
