New Dormitory to Open in Fall

The rising senior women of Winston-Salem State College are anxiously awaiting the opening of the new senior women's dormitory. The building is to be completed by April 15. Students will live in the new dormitory at the beginning of the next school term.

The opening of this dormitory will relieve much of the overcrowdedness of their present living conditions. For the past few years State College has been faced with the problem of overcrowdedness. There are presently as many as four girls to a room which makes it inconvenient for proper functioning and comfortable living.

This new dormitory, which has not been named, will house 120 women. The building covers a total area of 21,631.20 sq. ft. There are three floors and a basement to the building. The building appears to be of simple design from the exterior with only a small amount of decorative additions of pre-cast stone located at the entrance and a pre-cast lining around the sides.

Groove Phi Groove Organized

What is this new social organization that has captured many young men at the Winston-Salem State College? Roy Hicks, vice-president has this to say:

"The Groove Phi Groove Fellowship, Inc. was organized to show unity and fellowship of young men; to exemplify the betterment of manhood; and to show good sportsmanship."

Groove Phi Groove was first organized at Morgan State College in 1962, and was brought to W.S.S.C. in 1965.

Ten charter members of W.S.S.C. were made by the Groovemans at North Carolina College at Durham on February 6, 1965. W.S.S.C. is a potential school for a chapter of Groove Phi Groove Fellowship, Inc. Other schools with charters are Boston University, Central State College, Hampton University and Delaware State College.

To become a Grooveman, a young man must maintain at least a "C" average, and he must be in good standing with the college.

Hill Science Hall, Moore Dormitory Named Officially

By Barbara Turk
Two new buildings were dedicated Sunday, January 23, in Fine Auditorium. These two buildings—Hill Science Hall and a science building—were named in honor of Miss C. H. Moore, a former president of the college.

Dr. H. Kenneth Barker, Associate Executive Secretary of the Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, gave the dedication address. He was introduced by Dr. Kenneth R. Williams, President of Winston-Salem State College. The topic of Dr. Barker's address was "Building for What?"

He said, "Buildings do not make an institution great. They are made of steel, brick and concrete—that's all. Buildings do not determine the mission of students."

"Education, as never before, should have some indication and commitment to make a better society. It is kind of commitment, what kind of dedication will you make?" asked Dr. Barker.

The dedication service was held with the faculty and several in academic procession. Music was furnished by the college choir under the direction of Dr. James Hill. The procession and reception were played off by an instrumental ensemble directed by Mr. Harry Pickard.

Two Students Win Study Grants

JACQUELYN TAYLOR

Miss Gloria Herring, an Elementary Education major from Lakewood, New Jersey, has received a scholarship to study at Yale University this summer. Last summer, Miss Herring was the recipient of a scholarship to study at Columbia University.

The scholarship is offered by the Carnegie and Ford Foundations or the I.S.S.P., the Intensive Summer Studies Program, which was established in 1966 by Harvard, Yale, and Columbia Universities. The program was set up in an effort to identify and evaluate students capable of completing advanced degree programs, to encourage such students to apply to graduate schools, and to recommend them for admission to appropriate graduate committees.

Miss Herring will enroll at Yale June 22. The program will terminate August 18. Miss Herring, a junior at WSSC, plans to enter graduate school and pursue a degree in social research. She is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, a cheerleader, and an active member of many functions on and off campus. She enjoys dancing, skating, horseback riding, and listening to jazz and gospel records.

FLU PARALYZES CAMPUS

The Hong Kong flu bug — or one of its equally devastating cousins — hit Winston-Salem State College just before the Christmas recess. Class attendance dropped to almost nothing at times, nursing school classrooms became makeshift hospital wards and the academic machinery ground to a near halt as penicillin and aspirin replaced the normal oil of intellectual give and take.

It started a week and a half before classes were scheduled to end for Christmas on December 18. Students began reporting to the infirmary with headaches, fevers and general aches and pains.

Within several days about 100 students were confined in the infirmary which normally holds less than two dozen. Over 600 students had been treated as outpatients, and there were almost certainly others who simply took some aspirin and went to bed without bothering to consult the campus medical center.

Baltimore Hears Stokely's Plan

Stokely Carmichael and his wife, Miriam Makeba, both showing the signs of a strained series of speaking engagements, spent Saturday, April 12, in Baltimore delivering the message of Pan-Africanism (the world-wide unity of Black people) and warning of approaching genocide attempts from the American government.

After spending the past fourteen months in Guinea studying under now deposed Premier Kwame Nkruma of Ghana, Carmichael has returned to the states with a new look. Wearing his usual dark shades, Stokely now dons a heavy beard projecting the black look.

Addressing a large audience, Carmichael told of how the Nixon administration is moving toward extermination of Black people.

"Nixon is trying to move the country toward fascism . . . our only concern is how we are going to survive when this country moves toward fascism . . ."

New Library

A new library building has been added to our college campus. The library named for a former president of the college is centrally located facing the east. The library is a two-story basement plant with 20,500 square feet of floor space. This building was planned for a possible growth of 3,000 students. The site also conserves space for contingent future expansion.

The exterior and interior of the building are of modern design, with vinyl asbestos tile throughout. The lobby floor is terrazzo.

The first floor rises three or four steps above the ground. The main reading room, circulation desk, reserve book area, reference room, technical process area and administrative offices are located on this level.

The basement floor houses books. Staff offices, periodical reading room, browsing area, circulation desk, curriculum materials center, conference room, typing and listening room, and archives room are located on the second floor.

COURSE CANCELLED

As of July 1, 1978 the teaching degree program in biology will be cancelled at WSSU. Presently only two people are enrolled in the biology-education program. The biology department itself is in no danger and the decision to eliminate the teaching major will have little to no effect on the department as a whole.

The decision to eliminate the education program in biology was made on the basis of a study done by the Board of Governors.

The committee was headed by Donald J. Stedman. The study showed that at least 20 percent of the teachers educated at 15 North Carolina universities cannot find work.

WSSU Wants Bowman-Gray

By Faye M. Vernon
News Argus Reporter

Will Winston-Salem State University (WSSU) own Bowman-Gray Stadium? Only time—and City Hall—can tell since Chancellor Douglas Covington knows nothing more than the fact that the proposal is somewhere in City Hall.

Dr. Covington along with Mr. Willie Grissom, WSSU Vice-Chancellor for Business Affairs and Mr. C. C. Ross, former Chairman of the Board of Trustees, presented a two-hour presentation in June, before the Parks Recreation Commission of Winston-Salem. In speaking with Mr. Nick Jamison, Director of the Commission, it was learned that the Commission voted on the recommendation to sell the stadium to WSSU for $125,000. Yet, some commission members felt the city should donate the stadium to WSSU and that was the last publicized word from City Hall.

Program Will Honor Gaines

By Everett Jackson

Founder's Day, October 17, will be a special day for Clarence "Big House" Gaines. No, it's not his birthday or anniversary. It's the day for the dedication of the new C.E. Gaines Complex. The complex serves as a structure of gratitude for Clarence Gaines, the man, the coach...THE LEGEND.

What about Clarence Gaines. Where does he come from? What is he like and what are his accomplishments?

He was born Clarence Edward, May 21, 1923 in Paducah, Kentucky. He was the only child of Lester and Olivia Gaines. He was raised during the Great Depression.

Gaines' life has been centered around love. "In fact I rejected some of my love," said Gaines, "I was almost like a play toy."

It is often heard of a baby being born with a "silver spoon." But with a basketball? No, not really. However, it would seem almost synonymous to the tremendous coaching success of Clarence Gaines. "I took after my mother. She was very active in athletics," admits Gaines, "she always told me she was on a high school basketball team that never lost."

WSNC-FM In Stereo

By Abby Melvin

It looks as if the university may soon have a radio station. It recently received a construction permit from the FCC for the purpose of a non-commercial radio station. The new station, whose call letters are WSNC (Winston-Salem, North Carolina) is located in Hall-Patterson Communications building.

The main mission of the station will be that of progressive jazz. However, other musical types will be used. There will also be educational, news, public affairs, and interview programming. The station will broadcast on the 98.3 FM frequency. Mr. Clarence Thomas, station general manager and coordinator of the mass communications program, considers this to be an excellent frequency. He added that the station will reach a lot of students and although the station will begin transmission with 100 watts, it could eventually increase to 1000 watts.

Most of the personnel of the station have been chosen. The positions are all voluntary. As this edition of the News Argus went to press, six air personalities were in the process of being chosen. When asked if the station would run through holidays, Mr. Thomas explained that with the proper personnel, the station would run through holidays as well as the summer. The hours of the station will be from 8:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m., six days a week. The particular days have not been decided.

Because the radio station is considered to be a mass communications laboratory, it will be funded through the university. A Radio Club is being formed to serve as an auxiliary of the radio staff. The major purpose is to allow students other than those involved in the mass communications program to work with the station. All persons who are interested should contact Mr. Thomas, Dwight Jones, or Perry Johnson. There is no air date for the station as of yet. The mass communications department is waiting for the transmitters and antennas to arrive.
