

Want To Go Camping?

By Cheryl A. Lide
Editor-In-Chief

Many students on the campus of Winston-Salem State University may not be aware that we have a camp. Well, we do.

It is Camp Robert Vaughn, located approximately 23 miles away in Walnut Cove, N.C.

Camp Robert Vaughn consist of 241 acres of substantially wooded timber land with a developed 8 acre lake, suitable for boating, fishing and swimming. The property also includes 3 bath houses, 12 summer cabins, 2 framed tenant houses, and a large dining/recreation building.

At the center of the property there lies an open tract of land of approximately 20 acres on which the aforementioned structures are located. There are also 3 deep wells on the property with an adequate supply of water to serve each building.

Each bath house is served by a septic system.

At the beginning of this academic year, the university brought in Ms. Bessie Sherman, from the Department of Interior, to plan and implement programs for it.

Dr. Jerry Hickerson of continuing education is director of the camp and its programs.

Renovations to the camp are currently taking place. It has cabins, nature trails, a pavillion, lake, and other features students will see when they visit.

The problem is with the utilization of the camp. The administration would like to see the camp used more by students and faculty. According to administrative sources, it's potential is great.

Steps are being taken to increase the number of classes and events now scheduled at the camp.

A university faculty committee has been formed to give a comprehensive plan concerning the usage of the camp. This plan will be presented to the administration and the Board of Trustees.

According to Ms. Sherman, "Camp Robert Vaughn offers the University a tremendous opportunity to advance education and to provide a great service to the community. Also, it has the potential to become an outstanding addition to the Winston-Salem State University in the years to come. If you have not heard about it, know where it is, or visited it, you will.

Housing

By Angela Corbett

Are you willing to risk not having a dormitory room next year? Don't be left out in the cold. Make haste and apply for 1985-86 housing now!

Fall housing contracts are presently available so those students who wish to live on campus should apply right away in order to be guaranteed a room. This step must be taken before March 1, 1985. All applications recieved after March 1, will be placed on a waiting list. In order to provide beds for new students all unclaimed beds after March 1 will be reserved for new students through the month of July.

Along with fall housing, the Housing Office wants to inform students about Spring and Easter break. The closing of the dormitory for Spring and Easter break is beneficial to both the student and the housing staff. Many resident supervisors have accumulated vacation time and students also need to rest from their hard labors. In the past housing attempted to accomodate students, only to find that students really did not need the accomodation. Mr. Joseph Daniels recalls a case where there was a student and one dorm supervisor in Colson Hall.

If any student has a need for housing during this period, that is a serious need, the Housing Office will be glad to discuss it with you. However, there is no guarantee your need will be met.

Excessive vandalism in the residence halls, has absorbed a large amount of institutional funds each year. Students in the residence halls are going to be charged for excessive abuse, misuse, and damages to property. Room damages will be charged to the occupant. Markings and carvings on walls will be charged to the floor, while other areas will be charged to all occupants of the residence halls. In order that students clearly understand their responsibilities in the residence halls they should refer to their housing contracts.

Remember to submit your housing contracts at an early date since it is a first come, first serve basis. By doing this you will also be able to avoid getting stuck with an unpleasant roommate. Take advantage of these steps and make your year less hectic.
