Would you like some $90 chocolate legs? Chocolate has become over a billion dollar a year industry and because of this it has become known as a high-priced luxury.

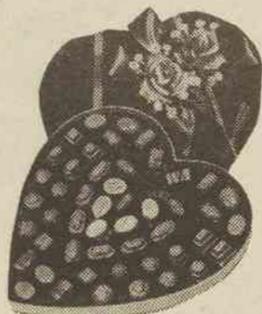

Over a million tons a year is eaten and it is at its highest sales ever. There is a great demand for chocolate on Valentine's Day, but there is even a greater demand during the Christmas holidays.

The name of Hershey has come to symbolize chocolate for many Americans. In Hershey, Pennsylvania, the chocolate capitol of the world, the streetlights are shaped like Hershey Kisses and the sweet smell envelopes the whole town.

Designers and manufacturers such as Bill Blass and Godiva are currently producing chocolates. Godiva has been called the "Rolls Royce of Chocolate" because of its excellent quality, specially molded pieces and elaborate gold box. Godiva sells for $19.50 a pound at Belk's at Hanes Mall in Winston-Salem.

The Swiss make the best chocolate, some say. It is handcrafted and contains no preservatives and usually sells for $24 a pound or higher.

Researchers have discovered that a chemical produced by the brain, phenylethylamine, is also found in chocolate. When you are attracted to someone phenylethylamine gives you an "up" and acts as a stimulus to other chemicals in your body. The more pheylethylamine your body produces, the more it needs. Thus, the broken heart's craving for chocolate. Chocolate has come to symbolize more than flavor, it symbolizes wealth, status, and surely LOVE.

He Works Hard For His Money

By Robert Lassiter

Students that work are not working just to be working. The majority of the college students work because they have to support themselves through school or help their parents pay their way through school. Others may be working for job experience. Whatever the reason, these students are not working to waste time.

O'neil Dunn, a senior at WSSU, commented that his job provides him with the proper training that can be used in his field of study, which is Business Administration. Dunn works for Godfather's Pizza.

Since the time of his employment, he has become shift manager. He realizes that you cannot always start at the top. He started out making pizzas and now he is in the managing aspects of the business.

Although Dunn works through the week, he also has to attend classes. The scheduling of work hours must be done around classes and studying. Dunn states "I must remember my first priority is to finish school". "Working in a fast food restaurant helps me to cope with different people: This will be helpful to me in the world of business", said Dunn.

O'neil Dunn is just one of the many students at Winston-Salem State University, that works and at the same time, a student.

Sometimes working may cause a problem in studying completely. Through the Career-Placement Center, these students who have to work, can find jobs that can be worked around their schedules and still find time for proper studying. For some students say that if they didn't have these jobs, they probably would not be in school. Therefore, a job is needed for some students to get an education.
