Male/Female Relationship Seminars Prove to be Successful

by Rita R. Archer

The Male/Female Relationship Seminar recently held in Brown Hall was sponsored by the Student Union Programming Board.

The seminar was presented in a panel discussion format. The members of the panel included Alisa Wilson, Carter Cue, Dawn Hand, Joy Bridges, Craig Johnson, Wayne Artis, Wayne Richardson, Kenchay Wilson and Coach Davie Sheppard.

Before the discussion started Coach Sheppard invited members of the audience to express their opinions and reminded them that no question was stupid. From this point on, sparks began flying.

Questions such as: Are men intimidated by powerful women? Why do the young men on this campus find it hard to relate to a young lady? and Why do young men find it hard to make commitments? were asked by the audience.

In answering these questions the discussion went all the way back to our African ancestors. Do men inherit or adapt to male behavior when it comes to women? We may never know.

Why is it so difficult for the young men of WSSU to commit to an honest relationship with a young lady? What is honesty was one of the highlighted topics. To some, honesty was having only one girl, giving straight forward answers, being understanding and having respect. And to others it depended on what type of honesty because they were not totally honest in all aspects of relationship.

Why don't we have any true men on campus? The men felt that all men on WSSU were not dogs. But there are some females who are not to get what they want also, especially those materialistic ones.

The discussion of Co-ed visitation arose and the students wanted to know why didn't they have it and they wanted to know if any faculty members were in the audience. Dr. Mandeline Scales, was present and explained to the students the problems visitation had encountered. She further explained to them that lack of cooperation from the students was one of the major downfalls of coed visitation.

There was a continuation of the Male/Female Relationship Seminar in Atkins Hall on April 23rd. Both seminars were successful and hopefully there will be other related discussions in the near future.
