

Interested In Improving The Library? The Library Clubs for YOU!!!

by Yolanda V. Jones

The newest addition to Winston-Salem State's organizational clubs is the O'Kelly Library Club.

This club was the idea of Donald Benson, assistant vice chancellor for Student Affairs. However Ms. Gwen Harris, reference librarian and other library staff members are organizing the club.

The club's purpose is to improve each student's outlook towards the library and to promote better library services. Each club member will learn more about using the library and then assist other students with utilizing library resources.

Club members will eventually serve as monitors in designated areas. They will also advise the library staff about reducing the abuse to library materials.

In addition, members will assist with preparing and distributing a monthly library newsletter.

The library staff will work closely with the club to try to change negative opinions concerning the library to positive ones. The club is mainly composed of students recommended by faculty and other students.

If you would like to join, you must be able to motivate others, be interested in the library and willing to share your knowledge with other Winston-Salem State University students.

Middle Grades Program To Be Offered By Education Department

by Debbie Harryman

The Middle-Grades Program is a new program in the Education Department here at WSSU.

Approved in June of 1985, the new program will certify teachers in grades 6-9. Prior to August 1, 1985 these grades were part of the old Intermediate Program which certified teachers in grades 4-9.

The Intermediate Program, is now designed to give teachers certification in grades 4-6. (The other three programs in education are: Elementary K-3, Secondary 9-12 and Special Education K-12).

However, any student completing the old requirements for Intermediate Education and enrolled in WSSU prior to August 1 will receive a double certificate - one for grades 4-6 and one for grades 6-9. Students enrolled after August 1 will receive only one certificate for either grades 4-6 or grades 6-9.

Presently there are fifteen students in the Middle-Grades Program, nine of whom already possess undergraduate degrees and are now seeking certification for middle grades. The remaining six students are freshmen who will become the first undergraduates to receive certification under the new program in 1989.

According to Middle-Grades Director Dr. Larry L. Hungerford, "The idea behind the Middle-Grades Program is to train teachers who are more specialized in those grades. One way of accomplishing this goal is to require teachers to take more specialized courses that are especially designed to help them meet the needs of adolescents. Courses such as Adolescent Literature, Adolescent Psychology, and Middle-Grades Curriculum are just a few of the courses we now require."

Dr. Hungerford, who also serves as both general studies and major advisor for students in the program during their four year stay at WSSU, also said that, "One of the most exciting things about the Middle-Grades Program is its flexibility. Students seeking certification have their choice of any two of the five different concentrations now offered at WSSU - Math, Language Arts, Science, Social Studies, or Reading."

Since approval for the new program came after the new catalogues had been ordered, students will not find the program listed. However, Dr. Hungerford asked that any student who may be interested in the program please contact him at his office in Coltrane 304 or call 761-2111. He has copies of the requirements for the program and is willing to answer any questions a student may have about the program.

Ann S. Cline Joins Co-op's Staff

by Victor O. Coffey
Managing Editor

Ms. Ann S. Cline has joined the CO-OP staff as Job Developer for CO-OP Education. She is replacing Maria Howell, a WSSU graduate who starred in "The Color Purple."

Cline is a native of Lexington, North Carolina where she lives with her husband and two children. Previously she was employed by First Union National Bank in Lexington for nine years.

In 1985, she graduated from Wake Forest University's School of Business and Accountancy specializing in Marketing. Cline plans on pursuing a Master's degree in Business Administration (MBA) in the fall.

When asked what she likes about WSSU Cline stated, "I like the people I work with because they are very friendly and willing to answer questions," said Cline, when responding to what she likes about her new position she said, "students are also willing to accept the help you are able to give them."

"I would like to see more students using the facilities offered by our office. One way this can be done by their signing up for CO-OP positions, because we have many companies that are sending information about available openings."

While not at WSSU Cline enjoys such activities as reading, and participating in sports. She also coaches a girls softball team. Ms. Cline is a member of the First Assembly of God where she is active in the Church Choir, a member of the Parents-Teacher Association, the Women's Roundtable and the Women's Political Caucus of Davidson County which "tries to increase women's awareness of the political process."
