Students Keep Dream Alive

by Mia Wilson, Staff Writer

"Keeping the Dream Alive," was the overall theme for the events scheduled on the campus of Winston-Salem State University, January 17, 1987 in effort to celebrate the remembrance of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

The celebration started with an indepth teach-in on Dr. King conducted by Dr. William H. Turner, chairperson of the Social Sciences department at WSSU. His speech concerned the Civil Rights Movement and its reflection on the blacks of today.

A luncheon, group discussion, voter registration and a NAACP membership drive was conducted after the teach-in. The purpose of the luncheon was to allow people to informally discuss the personal experiences dealing with the civil rights movement and to create ideas that will keep the dream alive in the community and on campus.

WSSU Students Enjoy Snow

by Andrea Crosby, Staff Writer

Snow we wanted, and snow we got. Plenty of it! More than most people could handle. It left them out of work and out of things to do. Nevertheless, for the students at Winston-Salem State University it was a different story. The snow was all they needed to arouse their playful spirits.

According to several students, the snow most definitely didn't keep them inside with nothing to do. Many of them enjoyed participating in snowball fights and rides down the football field slope. Where on the other hand, after being thumped, tossed and dunked in the fluffy white flakes, many students no longer considered the snow a relief from classes.

Many industrious students decided to use the snow vacation to get ahead in class work and to do things they normally neglect. Others were only inclined to catch up on the soaps and sleep.

Although the students accomplished many different things, most of them agreed that the snow gave them a needed but unexpected vacation.
