

Volleyball Team Had A Busy Season

by Joyce McMillan

THE WSSU volleyball team's winning streak of nine consecutive wins without a loss came to an abrupt stop when they met the Eagles of North Carolina Central University.

Despite playing at home in front of a home crowd, the Lady Rams went down to a tough Central team that seemed to be well-prepared to break the Ram's winning streak.

The Eagles defeated the Rams in three sets. In the first set, the Eagles won 15-5. The back lines of the Rams provided some good digs and the front line put the ball down well but as the game progressed, Central made several key plays and went on to defeat the Rams.

In the second set, the Rams took an early lead behind the steady serving of Phyllis O'Neil and the strong play of Donna McCoy, Lisa Lewis and Patty Cozart. Central surged back and took the lead as the Rams literally just stood there and watched. The Lady Rams seemed to have confusion on the court as to who should hit the ball. Central went on to win 15-10.

In the third set, the Lady Rams took a six to one lead and looked as if they were ready to play. But even with the early lead and the support of the Ram Football Team in the gym, the Lady Rams couldn't fight off Central's strong comeback. Central took a 9-8 lead and never looked back as they downed the Rams 15-8 and won the game.

Coach Al Roseboro said the players had encountered a "mental break down." "There was a lot of standing around doing nothing," said Coach Roseboro. He also stated that Central had beaten them before in a scrimmage.

"Central wanted them to win. We didn't want to win. They have never played this poorly before and they will never play this poorly again," commented Coach Roseboro after the game.

The Lady Rams didn't play that poorly again as they defeated Norfolk State in four sets at the very next home game.

in an article in the October issue of ESSENCE magazine.

The article concerned African-Americans who are living in Zimbabwe.

News Notes

Cue Featured in ESSENCE

Carter Cue, a 1987 WSSU graduate, was one of the many people featured

"This is a lifelong dream," he was quoted as saying in the article. "It can truly say I've come 'home.'" The Durham, North Carolina native is working for the United Methodist Church in Harare until his visit is over at the end of the year.

Ahh, the beer with the taste for food.

For great taste, it's a natural.
Natural Light™ from Anheuser-Busch.

R.H. BARRINGER DISTRIBUTING CO., INC.

Greensboro

Winston-Salem

Burlington