Eugene "Mercury" Morris Speaks To Student Body

by Craig Thomas

One of the National Football League's greatest running backs recently appeared on the Winston-Salem State University campus. Eugene Edward "Mercury" Morris gave a lecture on his bout with drug addiction on Tuesday, November 14th at 7:30 p.m. in the Kenneth R. Williams Auditorium.

Speaking before a crowd of WSSU students, faculty and community citizens, Morris presented an interesting and informative speech on why people do the things they do. "I'm not here to talk about drugs," he said. "I'm here to talk about choice." With that topic in mind, he went into detail and shared with the audience his lifestyle before, during and after the use of drugs.

It is important to realize that there is really no such thing as drug abuse, only "self-abuse," Morris explained. "Cocaine in itself is not dangerous—the choice to use it is. Cocaine is not an abusable item, but a person is." Morris was all-too-well familiar with his subject matter, for he spoke from personal, painful experience. In 1976 he began using cocaine as a form of relief from headaches resulting in a neck fracture he suffered three years before. Unfortunately, what started out as only an occasional use soon transformed into an undeniable habit, and his obsession with the drug left him almost penniless.

He hit rock bottom on August 18, 1982 when he was

Ellis Named To National Pan Hellenic Board

by Joyce McMillan

Tezra O'Nay Ellis, a senior English major from Cleveland, Ohio, has been named the second vice president of the National Pan Hellenic Council, Incorporated.

Ellis represents the eight undergraduate Greek organizations when she goes to speak at the regional and local council meetings.

Her duty is mainly to take the concerns of the undergraduate chapters to the meetings in various locations throughout the state and beyond. Ellis has traveled to represent the Council in Virginia;

South Carolina; and Nashville and will travel to Kansas City in January for the Executive Board meeting.

Of her traveling experiences and encounters, Ellis said "networking is important and there is nothing like it, it's very important".

Ellis also holds the position of treasurer for the WSSU Pan Hellenic Council. She will hold the position of second vice president for two years.

Ellis' ambition is to be a newspaper or magazine editor.
