Class of 1990 Gets It Started

by Tanya Williams,

Winston-Salem State University's Class of 1990 got the year started with a bang by sponsoring a "Let's Get It Started" jam held during the first weekend of the school year.

The event was a combination carnival and dance. The carnival which was held from 6 - 9 p.m., featured free balloons and paraphernalia displays by each of the campus fraternities and sororities. After dark, the festivity moved inside to Whitaker Gym with music played by James Cardwell.

The opening 'jam' is just the beginning of the plans for the year. The class, whose president is Melanie Yvonne Ford, a Durham native, is sponsoring a four night-five day cruise to the Bahamas aboard the Carnival Cruiseship Mardi Gras after graduation in May. The cruise is open to faculty, staff and members of the student body.

To add to this the class has a host of other activities planned. One such event is the 2nd Annual Mock Beauty Pageant, scheduled for October 25th, during Homecoming Week. On the other hand, the class has not neglected their duty to the community either. There are plans in motion for the class to "Adopt A Kid" for Christmas. The class will play "Santa" to a child chosen by Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Social Service.

All this, plus other plans, promise to make this last year of college a busy one for the Class of 1990. And, to top it off, the proposed gift to the university from the class is a donation to the university's centennial fund. The CLASS OF 1990 has gotten it started and hopes to end their college days with style.

Minority Business Recruiter Visits WSSU

by Craig Thomas

Sharon L. Donahue, manager of minority recruitment for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, recently visited WSSU.

Donahue works with the Minority Recruitment and Equal Opportunity Committee and the Minority Doctoral Fellows Committee. The goals of the committees are to integrate the CPA profession and to increase the employment opportunities for black and other minority accounting majors.

The AICPA offers two major programs: an on-going scholarship, which awarded #93 students nationwide with more than $380,000 in financial aid; and a doctoral fellows program for minorities who have attended historically black colleges or universities who are studying for a Ph.D in accounting. The winners agree to go back to school for the length of time they have the fellowship.

There are approximately 60-70 black Ph.D's in accounting, according to Donahue, thirteen of which have earned their degrees through these particular programs. "It's a very low number," she stated. "There are a number of minorities entering the profession, but we would like to see a lot more. One thing students need to consider is that this major can be used for many different jobs."

In 1969, the AICPA started the programs because it realized there were not nearly enough black CPA's or Ph.D's in accounting. Since its inception, the AICPA has given over $# million in scholarships.
