IYC Holds Black History Program

By Mattie Morrison

The Interdenominational Youth for Christ presented "Black Leadership For The 90's: It's Time For A Change," January 18, 1990 in the Green Room of the K.R. Williams Auditorium. The Special guest speaker was Garland R. Hunt, Esquire.

Hunt is from Richmod, Va; the National Director of New Generation Campus Ministries; Vice-President, Manna Christian Fellowship, Inc.; an ordained minister; a licensed attorney; graduate of Howard University's School of Law; appeared on the "700 Club" and "Heritage Today" (PTL) talk shows.

Hunt spoke at length about the morality and history of the black community. He said that it is time for a change and that the world especially America is in desperate need of one. Hunt captivated his audience with the rarely heard historical accountance of contributions made by our black ancestors. He mentioned Martin Luther King, Jr. and what a difference he made back in the sixties and how we now have black congressmen, governors, and mayors. He reminded the audience of where they came from, where they have yet to go, and he encouraged them to listen to his words and try to let our lives revolve around a better way of life.

Hunt used the scriptures from the Holy Bible to express his thoughts and to explain his theories about the down fall of today's society. "It's time for a change," he exclaimed.

On the other hand Hunt was frank and very blunt when he explained what ideas young women and men should abide by before becoming involved in sexual relationships. He preached abstanance, righteousness, and purity, instead of, letting the lusts of your body win out.

Hunt insisted that the black community has become to accepting to what society has dished out to them. "When America sneezes the black Americans catches a cold," he said. "No matter what the consequences are who will stand up and preach the truth? "Who is courageous enough to speak out and say what's right?"

will be able to listen to the station.

WSNC staff would like to note that they have achieved some firsts thus far this semester. They broadcasted the WSSU vs NC Central basketball game, and they were the only radio station at the Livingstone basketball game and they were the first media to interview 'BigHouse' Gaines after his 800th win!

twelve books deal with nutrition.

Since Gregory has been a professional observer of the world since his stint as a comic in the 1960s naturally he is an opinionated man. Whether or not people share Gregory's views of the world, most people would have to admit that his statements make an impact. For instance, according to Gregory, the nation's savings and loans collapse can be directly attributed to the CIA's need for money to carry out assassinations throughout the world. If this is true, CIA assassinations in the 90's will cost about $300 billion dollars. Now that's expense!

In a more traditional vein, Gregory targeted a concern that has been on the minds of many black leaders lately, the decline of the black family. Gregory believes this problem like any other can be remedied through faith in God. In his own words, "When you try everything else and it don't work, try God." Commenting further on the church as a remedy he added, "We treat our cars and clothes better than God's temple."

Gregory's challenge as he describes it is to make people think about the information that the media gives them. The information that Gregory gives in his speeches is fast and furious, covering nearly every topic imaginable. But what more could you expect from a man who proclaims himself, "One of the most socially aware men on earth?"
