

NEWS

ARGUS

NEWS BRIEFS

Seniors Bid Adieu

On November 13th, the 1993 Ram Football season ended. Seven WSSU seniors played in their last collegiate football game. These very dedicated players sacrificed many social events, and special school gatherings to help make Ram football what it has been the past four to five years - "a winning tradition."

Three of these seven seniors helped bring back-to-back CIAA Championships to Winston - Salem State in 1990 and 1991. These seven individuals include: #11 William McKee, (WR, from Greensboro, NC); #14 Rovell McMillian, (QB, from Fayetteville, NC); #38 Antonio "Tiny" Stevenson, (LB, from Winston-Salem, NC); #72 Kelley Goodman, (OL, from Cleveland, OH); #91 Travis Perry, (LB, from Wendell, NC); #95 Rodney Witherspoon, (DL, from Newport News, VA); and #83 Theron A. Davis Sr, (WR, from Winston-Salem, NC).

Best Magazine

The most popular magazine on American college campuses is Cosmopolitan, according to a recent survey by the National Association of College Stores.

The survey ranked the nine other most popular magazines on college campuses, in descending order, as Glamour, People, Time, Vogue, Newsweek, Gentleman's Quarterly, Rolling Stone, Sports Illustrated and Mademoiselle.

INSIDE

Writing Clinic.....	page 4
New Era in Basketball.....	page 5
Edmonds' Mom.....	page 7
Microscopic Surgery.....	page 8
WSNC Programing.....	page 12

Bond Referendum Passes: Campus Renovations Will Soon Begin

• $310 million to be used by North Carolina universities

BY KIMBERLY TERRY
Staff Writer

Break out the champagne. Let the celebration begin. The North Carolina Bond Referendums have passed.

The result of the bond voting ended in 53 percent for the bond and 47 percent against the bond, even though the voter turnout was less than expected, the bonds passed. Although some voters questioned the amount of money that Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) would receive in comparison to the White universities, the bond passed.

Shanta Yelverton, a Winston-Salem State University student feels, "WSSU got slighted in the distribution of money. It's time that the government realizes the importance of HBCU."

"We are not getting everything that we deserve," said Atty. Larry Little, a part-time member of the Social Science faculty.

Andre Walker, a senior Business Administration major said, "the Student Union Complex will be great for students.

Now we will be able to get all of our concerns taken care of in one place; but I'm not satisfied because we didn't get enough money."

Leah Ramseur said, "the bond referendum will help complete renovations to the library. Hopefully, this will attract new students to WSSU."

The passing of the Bond will help provide WSSU with two major developments: the completion of renovations to the C.G. O'Kelly Library and a Student Union Complex. This complex will house a dining hall and student services offices. WSSU is scheduled to receive $7,192,850.

The C. G. O'Kelly Library has been under renovations for the past three years and the passing of the Bond will help finish this project.

According to Dr. Mae Rodney, director of the library, "it will be a wonderful boost to the physical facility of the building. The bond will make this happen. It will provide additional study, meeting and stack space and it will truly give us a university library."

"I feel strongly that the bond is a good thing for the university and I approve of the use of the money because the library must be finished so that books can be placed in use for all students and faculty," said William T. Burke, associate professor of English.

Thomas Leach, director of the Hauser Student Union said, "I am happy that the money is coming to the University. First, it will allot money to complete renovations at the library. Second, a comprehensive student center and student services area will now be a part of the campus." Leach's only complaints were that he felt WSSU didn't ask for enough money and that the money should have been more equally allocated.

WSSU's Chancellor Cleon F. Thompson Jr., said, "the passing of the bond referendum is a significant step forward for the university's building program. Now that the bond has passed, this should give the community and university encouragement to go on."

Parking: The Saga Continues

STAFF REPORT

Parking is still a very big problem here at Winston-Salem State University. The questions most faculty and staff members and students ask are, "When will the problem be solved?" and "Is there anyone on campus that is slightly concerned about the situation?"

One of the main reasons for this problem is that some drivers still haven't bothered to purchase a parking decal. The decals cost $50 for faculty and staff and $30 for students.

Many commuting students feel that they pay too much for a parking decal and still have to walk across campus to their classes. This is just an excuse. This campus isn't that large. At most colleges and universities, commuting students have to park in peripheral lots and walk to the main campus.

Robin Curtis, a sophomore Psychology major said, "I feel there is not enough parking spaces for commuting students. The parking lots that are designated for commuting students are far away. I feel those lots should be for the boarding students."

"I don't like the parking situation. They (security) are trying to limit the parking spaces. I feel that if I pay $30 for a parking decal, I should be able to park where I want," said Tonya Brewer, a junior Mass Communications major.

Faculty and staff members feel if they are forced to purchase a parking sticker, they should be able to park in designated faculty/staff parking lots and spaces. This does not happen because most students looking for a parking space, park their

Please see page 5