Parkland High School band gets ousted from Homecoming parade for breaking down — a lot

By Janell J. Lewis

What started as a day of high-stepping fun and laughter turned to disappointment when Winston-Salem police ousted 130 members of the Parkland High School band from the Homecoming Parade as they marched along 4th street.

Joan Council, Parkland's band director, said she had no idea why they were being escorted out of the procession. Police motioned for the band to turn right onto Liberty Street from 4th Street about a half mile from where band members started on the parade route.

After being pulled from the parade line, Parkland band members then watched as the procession continued without them. "It was a very disappointing situation and it was a situation that should have been handled in a better manner," Council said.

Parade coordinator Albert Roseboro attributed the foul-up to miscommunication. "I share the frustration with Parkland that it happened the way it did," Roseboro said. "They were a victim of circumstance in that situation."

But Roseboro added that the band was escorted out of the parade line when its performance lasted longer than the allotted time given, delaying other performers. He said parade rules and regulations were given to all participants the morning of the procession.

However, Parkland officials said they didn't have an opportunity to review the policies before the start of the parade. Additionally, they complained that other parade participants violated the rules, but were allowed to continue.

Roseboro has sent a formal apology to members of the Parkland High School band. Also, Parkland was invited to perform during halftime at the WSSU vs St. Augustine football game at Bowman Gray Stadium.

"In justice for the parade, we got a chance to mend fences," Council said, "and this was also to show the community that the relationship between the community and the school is still good."

Un comienzo fresco para el Club de Español

By Cecilia Davis
ARGUS REPORTER

Ahora hay un hogar para las personas que tengan interés en cosas hispanicas—El Club de Español. El club ha reanudado este semestre tras varios intentos inútiles.

Dr. Micheal Brookshaw, profesor de Español y consejero del club dice que, "El club ha existido desde 1985-86 y ha sido activo esporadicamente hasta ahora."

Aunque el club tiene una historia de más que 15 años, es una historia puntuado por periodos de ser latente.

"Si tendría que reducir la problema a una cosa diría que es la falta de devoción de los estudiantes. Necesitamos estudiantes que quieren trabajar", comenta Dr. Brookshaw. Ahora el club se compone de los estudiantes que estudian español como asignatura principal o secundaria, por lo general. A pesar de esto, "el club da bienvenido a cualquiera tiene interés en cosas hispanicas", insiste Dr. Brookshaw.

Los reuniones son cada mes en el primer y tercer miércoles a las siete de la noche en el Laboratorio de Lenguas en Hall Patterson. Los estudiantes que ya son miembros tienen expectativas altas para la organización. Shari Hasty, quien estudia español como asignatura principal y también sirva como una oficial del club dice, "Nosotros vamos a ser muy activos. Queremos ayudar a otros enseñar sobre la cultura hispanica. Es fantastico ser en campus otra vez! No solamente los estudiantes son exitados. Dr. Brookshaw quiere ver el club hacer un viaje a un país que habla español y participar en actividades como "Spanish Roundtable" y "Spanish Movie Night."

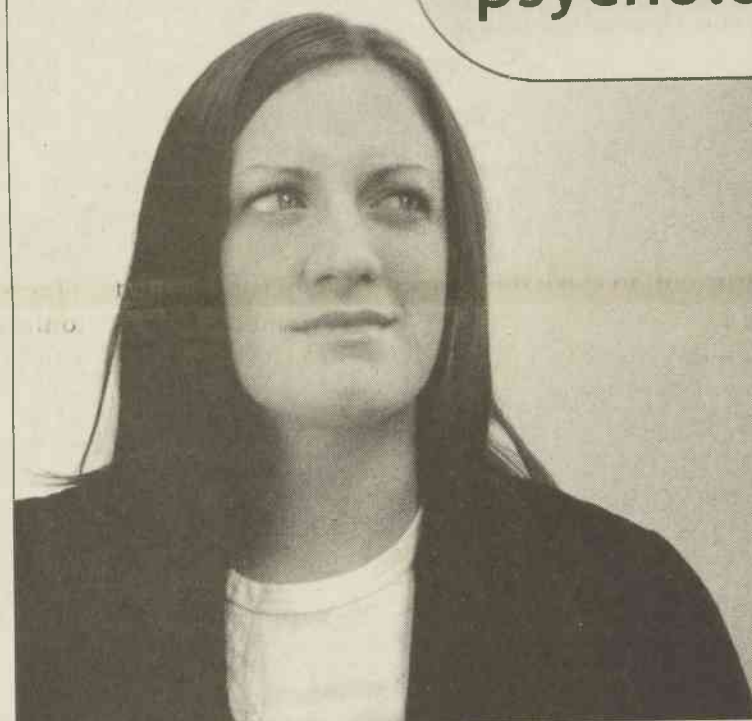

"Hay muchos oportunidades para el club aquí—el periódico Que Pasa, La Liga Hispana de Winston-Salem, el nuevo Laboratorio de Lenguas, y un gran comunidad hispana—pero es la responsabilidad de los estudiantes aprovecharlos."
