

www.thenewsargus.com

Tuesday, October 19, 2010

The News Argus Page 7

RAMBLE ONLINE POLL RESULTS

Which homecoming event are you looking forward to most?

Morehouse University is an all-male historically black college and university that has produced some historically influential African-American figures in history, after all Martin Luther King Jr. attended Morehouse

Anyone familiar with Morehouse knows the university prides itself on producing the Morehouse Man. A Morehouse Man exudes masculinity and strength.

A Morehouse Man dons a suit, is impeccably wellgroomed and is, without a doubt, intelligent.

However, according to an interview with Philip Hudson in necolebitchie. com, he suffered harassment at Morehouse at the hands of students for his sexuality and appearance.

The 'makeup' of a Morehouse man

Hudson recalls the constant harassment on campus from the cafeteria to the classroom. He was constantly taunted, spit on and had items thrown at him regularly.

His only safe haven was his dormitory. He says he attended Morehouse because it was an exceptional school and he had hoped to become more masculine.

Our Take:

To say the least, Hudson does live up to what many consider a Morehouse Man. As I stared at the photograph of Hudson wearing make-up and women's clothing, I was shocked. Hudson and a group of his alternatively-dressed friends inspired a dress code at Morehouse, but the school's administration seems to have sanctioned their harassment.

After reading his ordeal, I think it's all the more important for schools to work toward embracing people's differences instead of shunning them.

Hudson's experience gave me a chance to rethink masculinity and what it means to be a man.

Many would argue he has no place at Morehouse because it's a conservative school and he doesn't fit the mold.

Yet, how many places were accepting of LGBT people until a group of individuals decided that needed to change.

While initially I thought he didn't fit the mold but, Hudson truly does.

He's a black man who's strong enough to stand up for what he believes in, despite extreme adversity.

I would like to think a Morehouse Man is one who uplifts his fellow man instead of tearing him down because he wasn't in a suit.

> Arnetta Randall www.collegenews.com Thursday, Oct. 14

1.1.0

1 C.

e . . .

. .

i . Na

. .

a na

5 . **•/

64

10.

ta di

1 - M

116

Homecoming Comedy Show with Gary Owens & Tony Roberts 8%

Red & Black Affair ft. Wale & Monica 31%

Homecoming football game vs. Pembroke 36%

To participate in the poll,

Remembering the Cole on Columbus Day Commemorating heroism, not colonialism

September 11, 2001 is a day that rocked the country and undeniably changed the comfort level of the security of most Americans.

What many Americans forget, is that less than a year before, on Oct. 13, 2000, the United States suffered its first real terrorist attack of the millennium.

I was there.

The USS Cole, a fast attack destroyer deployed to the Persian Gulf, took a shot to the gut as the American vessel was conducting replenishments in Aden, Yemen.

A small fishing boat, loaded with explosives, rammed the side of her hull.

A destructive blaze ensued, claiming the lives of 17 sailors, most of them no older than 25. The Al-Qaeda Network took weeks, I spent my days and responsibility for this heinous act, promising to repeat a terrorist attack on the United States annually.

I was part of a search and rescue team that led a quick response to the injured ship.

We had the solemn duty of setting up a security and Flood & Fire Watch.

The USS Cole was shredded up and across its port (left) side, taking out most of the galley and part of an auxiliary room.

As we boarded the vessel, the heat of the sun and the chill of death caused me to sober my thoughts; up to this point everything that I had ever done in the U.S. Navy was just training for events such as these.

This was detrimental. For the better part of four nights on small boats and flight decks.

Sometimes I was inside of an unlit compartment, knee deep in water, coping with smell of those who had passed on

Other times, I baked in the Arabian heat and tried my best to help the survivors cope with the surreal events of the past month.

There had never been a more pivotal moment in my life, let alone my career, that forced me to take account of my own purpose and worth.

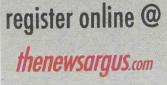

As Winston-Salem State commenced its fall break (which happened to coincide with the governmentobserved holiday Columbus Day), students and faculty got a chance to take a breath and relax from their normal

Meanwhile, Naval Station Norfolk, USS Cole's home port, commemorated Oct. 10, 2010 as the 10-year anniversary of the attack on the destroyer.

Although the validity of Columbus Day is arguable, the heroism of those sailors and their sacrifices to the United States are not.

As time moves on and WSSU approaches another year, take time out in 2011 to celebrate the freedoms that you have by remembering the fallen service members on that fateful day.

Instead of focusing on a day littered with controversy, take advantage of your leisure and say a prayer for the families of the lost.

routine.

Jaye Cole Assistant Editor

٦ S S

JORDAN HOWSE Editor In Chief BRANDON COLEY Chief Online Producer and Graphics Editor JAYE COLE Assistant Editor NATALIE DAVIS Assistant Editor JARRETT DAWKINS Chief Photographer BRANDON WAINRIGHT Staff Photographer JORDAN HOLLOWAY Sports Reporter JAMIE HUNTER Staff Reporter VICTORIA STAPLES Staff Reporter BIANCA PENDER Staff Reporter EBONY SMITH Staff Reporter

STEPHANIE DOUTHIT Technical Adviser and Advertising Sales & Marketing Manager DR. LONA D. COBB Faculty Adviser

THE NEWS ARGUS OFFICE Carolina Hall G00 601 S. Martin Luther King Jr. Drive Winston-Salem, N.C. 27110

Newsroom 336-750-2327 FAX 336-750-8704 Argus Advertising 336-750-8701

www.thenewsargus.com

The News Argus, the official student newspaper of Winston-Salem State University, is produced in conjunction with three journalism classes in the Department of Mass Communications. Any full-time WSSU student is eligible to join the staff. The News Argus is published on Tuesdays during the fall and spring semesters but not published during the summer semester, holidays and University breaks

The News Argus is an affiliate of Black College Wire; Collegenews.com; CollegePublisher.com; TheCampusBuzz.com; College Media Advisers; Black College Communication Association; CNBAM; N.C. Scholastic Media Association; National Newspaper Association; Society for News Design