

EVALUATION PROGRAM GIFT

CAMERATA SINGERS TO APPEAR ON T.V. THIS SUNDAY

The Camerata Singers have taped a television program for WSJS-TV to be broadcast Sunday, December 18, at 8:30 p.m. They will sing numbers ranging from a Moravian anthem to a Polish lullaby.

The girls of the Chorus will also perform. They will sing the "Hodie" from Benjamin Britten's "Ceremony of the Carols." Both of these groups are under the direction of Phillippe Buhler, instructor in Solfeggio and Theory at the School of the Arts.

COLLEGE BOARDS

All students planning to take College Boards in January or March should send in their applications before Christmas. Mr. Kimzey has extra applications if any student needs one.

Mr. Kimzey has stated that students should apply to colleges where they might plan to attend next year. After completing their part of the application, they should to the forms in to Mr. Kimzey so that he can complete recommendations and transcripts. The Registrar should also have this information on file for reference.

RAFF TRAVELS TO DURHAM

Miss Lois Raff, high school history teacher, took a group of her students to see Peter Shaffer's "The Royal Hunt of the Sun," Thursday evening, December 8. Dealing with the story of Pizarro and his conquest of Peru in the mid-sixteenth century, the play is unique in the minimum scenery: bare planks of wood, a metal emblem, and a rack of lights. The play was produced at Page Auditorium at Duke University by the Circle in the Square Productions, an associate of Theater Guild Productions. Traveling with Miss Raff were Sam Kephart, Susan Sibley, and Susan Walker.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

"The Learning Institute of North Carolina has given a sizable sum to the School of the Arts to assist in the evaluation of the High School Academic program," announced Dr. John F. Cone, College Academic Dean.

In coming months the staff will consider innovations and ways to correlate work in the academics and arts.

The staff has been invited to spend several weeks this June at Quails Roost, North Carolina, to meet with consultants and experts in the academics and humanities. From this study, the staff will endeavor to make a more creative and unique program at the School of the Arts.

Dr. Cone will be traveling to Washington, New York, and Harvard to discuss the program at the school and to work with the evaluation. Next week Dr. Cone will go to Atlanta to confer with officials about the College accreditation. Although it will be about six years before the college will be fully accredited, all the courses offered here until that time will automatically become accredited with the college. In January representatives will visit the school to discuss the college accreditation and to advise the NCSA staff.

FIVE STUDENTS GO TO NEW YORK

Five flute students of Mr. Philip Dunigan, chaperoned by Miss Mary Cartwright traveled to New York this past weekend to attend two recitals by the celebrated French flutist, Jean-Pierre Rampal, at Philharmonic Hall.

The students also spent an afternoon at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and dined at a Chinese restaurant in Chinatown. Sunday afternoon the group attended a concert at Greenwich House Music School in Greenwich Village.

Rampal's first concert was performed at 11:30 p.m. Saturday night. The "late, late" concert was all Handel. The second performance was Sunday night at 8:30 p.m. Rampal performed all of the Bach Sonatas for flute.

Becky Troxler's parents loaned their VW bus to the group for the trip.
