Weaver Residents Recycle Cans And Paper

by Caroline F. Kearns

It all began with one person--a soccer player, Tasha Pinson, who lives on the third floor of Weaver dorm. Tasha is conscious of environmental issues and recycles as often as she can. She soon convinced other students to do the same.

Last fall, the other women on the third floor of Weaver began bringing their empty aluminum cans to Tasha's room. Tasha said they did it because they knew she'd break their arms if she caught them throwing cans in the trash. Tasha used to carry these cans downstairs to the collection bins set up by Tri-Beta.

But a few months ago, things changed. Tasha convinced her floor advisor to get some extra collection bins from maintenance. Now the third floor of Weaver recycles not only aluminum cans but also paper products. Tasha hopes to continue this endeavor next fall and hopes to spread recycling throughout the campus.
