

HERE'S MUD IN YOUR EYE

The only difference between Santa Claus and Charley Howell is that Santa comes once a year.

Louis Mack's last hair cut looks like it was done with a lawn mower.

Who is commonly known as the "Ranch Boy"?

Will someone please tell me why Otis Hearn is called "The Keeper of the Veil"?

Have you noted that Bettie B's leaning on the piccolo and sending herself to the tune of "I'll Get Along Somehow"?

"Doc" seems to know quite a bit of W. Baird's moves. I wonder who tells him.

Speaking of Edward Roberts we think of the maxin, "Still water runs deep." You wouldn't think it, but he is what they call up the way a "Vulcher."

The "hot iron" in the Thomas Building and "Kongoline" in the Lyman Building. Beauty endureth pain. Yes suh!

Here's the latest — Juan Triana takes only about twenty minutes to write his Marie but takes one hundred and twenty minutes to write his Jenny.

It is said that, "Wise men think alike but fools disagree."

Yes, 'tis true — Pete White says his prayers every night, "Little Audrey Amen" isn't that a killa dilla?

Whenever the boys sit down to play bridge against Thomas Johns they first get a loaf of bread. Why? Because they know they got a big ham with them.

"Simplicity" is a gift of the gods. Oh! Miss Bullock, how could you?

Who is often called "The litta bitta woman and her litta bitta men"?

Patterson—Barber—Gaines.

ELIMINATION OF THE CENTER JUMP IN BASKETBALL

One of the major changes in the rules of basketball this year was the elimination of the center jump. James Naismith, inventor of the game, believes that this rule will increase game attendance because of the possibility of the weaker team's chances for scoring, which will make the game faster and more exciting for the spectators.

There is no doubt that the new rule will offer more excitement for the basketball fans, but it is very injurious to the players. Mothers and fathers who shudder each fall as their sons risk their necks and limbs on the football field for the glory of their dear old Alma Mater now are face to face with a post-season worry that threatens to be worse than the original, which is college basketball minus the center jump.

Elimination of the center jump has turned the once ladylike game into the hardest, cruelest, most tiring game in sport. It is not hard on the large college teams which have plenty of capable reserves on hand, but the small schools which have a comparatively small squad, will find the continuous running, twisting and chasing, a big handicap from the lack of substitutes for the tired and wornout players—M. A. Dixon.
