

purpose. He believes that we should always have a goal, and to do everything in our power to obtain that goal. "Be true to your Alma Mater," he admonishes us.

Retired now, enjoying ease and contentment, the greatly sought-after fruits of a life worthwhile, our beloved Dean dwells in his lovely home on St. Augustine's campus, satisfied to give up his active leadership in order to devote himself to cultivating the friendships of age and youth comradely companionship. To Dean Boyer, St. Augustine's College symbolizes a dream-come-true, a purpose fulfilled, a goal attained. To us, Dean Boyer symbolizes the highest idea of Christian citizenship, and to him, we give a rose, exemplifying the beauty of his soul, the sweetness of his spirit, and the colorfulness of his character.

ALWAYS BUSY

How often have you heard this thought expressed or implied in some way? "I never find time enough to do all the things that I would like to do or rather the things I should do in the course of the day, simply because I am always busy doing something." This thought is sometimes said or implied with a sense of self-importance, at other times in despair. But have you ever stopped long enough to find out if you are really so busy that you cannot determine your own possibilities and limitations? It maybe that you are just in a continuous turmoil getting no place fast.

It is true that life may seem crowded and busy now, but in facing realities you go from one thing to another, filling odd hours with play and unconsciously the day has passed before you have had time to realize its worth and meaning. Was it because you were too busy? If so, the day was lived in vain, simply because you have failed to exercise your effort to accomplish the real purpose of the day.

When life seems to be overrun with obligatory tasks, do not allow yourself to become too busy to take a little time to sort things out. Don't you think it would be a good idea to plan your every-day living as nearly to your ability and perfection as you see fit? It is wise to set your handard high, but the test is to keep it there.

We owe it to ourselves to live life abundantly, joyously and above all with a real purpose. Why break your neck trying to save time when you do not know what to do with time saved? Life was not meant to be easy living day after day but rather an equally trying and hard one wherein you and I have to dig out the bitter and plant it with the sweet.

Take time to find your individual equilibrium. You alone can become master of your everyday living, and you only can determine whether each day will be a hectic and cluttered one or a balanced and perfected one.
