

DEAR EDITOR:

For quite some time people have been leaving trash and bottles on the tables in the lunch room. We have a sufficient number of waste cans in there to take care of all the trash that we may accumulate during the hours when people are eating so that no-one is forced to leave trash.

We have a new school, and we should all be proud enough of it to take care of it in every way so that others may be as proud of it as we are.

Thank you,
GM

Accepting responsibility is the essence of maturity, but the freshman class seems to still be in its first childhood. While we all wish to be like one big, happy family, it seems we have forgotten how to clean up after ourselves. It takes only a few steps to walk from the tables in the lunchbar to the trash cans provided for us to dispose of our trash material. Likewise, ash trays and smokestands are provided for those who smoke to dispose of their cigarettes.

We have designated only one hour of our school week for worship, and yet we have not sincerely dedicated this hour to God. Our response to God should be one of respect and silence as we enter Chapel each Tuesday morning. The respectful silence that should be followed when entering Chapel on Tuesday mornings is a duty that should be a pleasure for each Wesleyan freshman.

JACICISH?

What would you do if you got a Jacicish for Christmas? With mistletoe used as Christmas decoration nearly everyone receives a Jacicish for Christmas. A Jacicish is a kiss and a hug.

Dr. William Sasser, Director of Music, answered in the Christmas spirit when he said, "Stuff it in the Christmas turkey."

Generosity of one sort or another appeared in many replies. Patsy Matthews answered, "Give it to someone else." Jane Smith said "Give it to North Carolina Wesleyan," and Faye Simpson said, "I'd give it to Dr. Harwood." Mr. W. Jasper Smith, Comptroller, would "Present it to Mr. Collins."

John Alden and Henry Sanders had a different thought. John said, "I'd kill the guy that gave it to me," and Henry would "Give it to someone I didn't like."

The intellectual atmosphere also appeared in the replies. "I'd read it," answered President Thomas Collins. Susan Black would inspect it and Dr. Archibald Sharer, Professor of Biology and Natural Science, would put it in a cage.

Mrs. Eleanor Wilkinson, Instructor of Mathematics, quite naturally replied, "I'd scream!"

Vann Massey would "Go back for more," and Omar Hamad said "I'll take it."

Mrs. John Hardy, Manager of the Snack Bar, said "I'm going to give it to Lillie Mae Delamar. If she doesn't know what to do with it, no one does."
