

Billy Jester (Danny Shepard) looks lovingly at Nancy Finkle (Barbara Brown) while the chorus (Sue Ketcham, Miriam Leyda, Sherry Bageant, Angela Powell, Connie Murray, and Jeanie Johnson) sings along.

Meanwhile, back in the rehearsal room, Anthony Dingman, Stage Director, lights another cigarette and listens as Berry Lambert and Eileen O'Grady sing "Colorado Love Call," and Danny Shepard calls Barbara Brown his "Once in a Blue Moon" girl. Out in the hall, Mack Sturgill and Maria Gargano sing of the "Vienna of days gone by."

Wesleyan Contributes

67-68 academic year. Much of this money is, of course, spent in the Rocky Mount community. The material assets of the college could not be considered without reference to the cultural assets afforded by the college.

Probably the best known and the most appreciated of these have been the campus visits made by groups such as the New Christy Minstrels and N. C. State Glee; concerts given by Wesleyan Singers and Concert Band, the Platters and Amanda Ambrose; the programs presented by folk singers, poets, pianists, cellists, guitarists; talks made by scholars; and the plays staged by Wesleyan Players.

Among the many faculty members who contribute time and energy to the community are Dr. Allen S. Johnson and Floyd D. Sawyer, both members of the Kiwanis Club; Mack Sturgill, Vance Mizelle, and Dr. Jack E. Teagarden, participants in Tank theater; Corbitt Rushing, D. S. Johnson, Dr. Johnson, Dr. James Hailey, Dr. Hugh Bond, Dr. Raymond Bauer, and Dean

Sim Wilde, who all teach Sunday School classes in their churches. Richard Dill, Dr. and Mrs. William Sasser, and Dr. Allen Cordts take active parts in the music departments of their respective churches.

Thus, Wesleyan contributes both materially and culturally to the surrounding communities.
