WCT ANNOUNCES 'CRUCIBLE' CAST

The Wesleyan College Theatre made public recently its choice of cast members for its spring production of Miller's "The Crucible."

Cast as the male lead in the role of John Proctor is Michael Dwyer, with Sean Moran as Governor Danforth and Keith Feelemyer as Reverend Hale.

The three female leads are Ann Bland as Mary Warren, Carolyn Estes as Abigail, and Eileen O'Grady as Elizabeth Proctor. In supporting roles are Barbara Brown as Rebecca Nurse, Helen Steiner as Goody Putnam, Maria Gargano as Mercy Lewis, Jeannie Johnson as Betty Parris, and Ernestine Dancy as Tituba.

In supporting male roles are Bryan Stearns as Rev. Parris, Michael Berg as Giles Corey, Dave Siple as Judge Hawthorne, Roland Shaw as Thomas Putnam, Bob Leyda as Willard, Danny Shephard as Cheever, and Russ Shoop as Hopkins.

It has been said of Miller's "The Crucible" that it is one of the best contemporary examinations of the historical and ever-present human tendency to wreck vengeance on others through the use of a conspiracy mania to pinpoint scapegoats for societies.

FIRE ALERT MONITOR INSTALLED IN SOUTH

In keeping with their efforts to aid the local volunteer fire department, the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega purchased a radio monitor.

Tom Mowbray, President of APO, explained how this monitor will enable Wesleyan's volunteers to hear any requests for fire or rescue assistance as soon as they are transmitted to the nearest station. Volunteers will be able to leave immediately rather than having to be alerted by telephone.

The newly set up communications network also includes two-way radio communications between South Hall and one mobile unit. This new equipment was purchased in order that our student volunteers might be able to answer more calls as well as to reduce (greatly) the time involved in reaching the emergency.

In the past three weeks, APO members have passed two first aid courses and have been certified as qualified ambulance attendants by the State of

CLASS OF 1973 GETS GLIMPSE OF CAMPUS LIFE

Words of gratitude and congratulations are in order to the Bishops Club for the success of the Class of 1973 Visitation Weekend, February 7-9. Approximately one hundred prospective members of the Class of '73 visited North Carolina Wesleyan College this weekend, participating in activities co-ordinated by the Bishops Club.

Students, who volunteered to host these visitors in their dorms, met their guests either Friday or Saturday in the Trustees' Room in the Administration Building. Usually the Wesleyan hosts gave the visitors and their parents tours around the campus, indicating points of interests and answering any questions which arose.

On Friday, the visitors were invited to eat dinner in the cafeteria followed by the UNC-C. vs. Wesleyan basketball game and a dance sponsored by the Students Against Architectural Barriers in the Student Union.

At 1:30, Saturday, there were programs organized for students and their parents with the former meeting in Gravelly, 105 and the latter in Gravelly, 101. Mr. Jess Blackman and Mr. Robert Lowenthal spoke to students and Dean Jack Moore spoke to the parents while Dean Sim O. (Continued on Page 2)

MRS. BATCHELOR DISCUSSES CAFETERIA SYSTEM

Lack of space is the major problem facing Mrs. Batchelor, supervisor of the cafeteria and its services. She feels that the food, on the whole is good for the type of set-up, kitchen space, equipment, amount of help, and limited storage space. She stated that the lack of student help had become a problem for the longest extended time since she has been at Wesleyan.

There are many improvements she would like to make in the cafeteria. She would like to add a system to provide more variety in beverages, grills, and a deep fat fryer.

She praised the staff and added that they sincerely tried to please the students.

Mrs. Batchelor stated that she is always looking for ways to perform special services for students and she stressed that she hoped the Food Services committee could function as a source for ideas. She also emphasized the necessity of student's full co-operation if new systems were to be tried.

As supervisor of the cafeteria and its services, Mrs. Batchelor has many duties to perform each week. Among the tasks she is called upon to perform are the planning of menus for the three meals served each day. Planning these menus at least a week in advance, Mrs. Batchelor uses student comments and the amount of previous consumption as the main guidelines.

Included in her job is a great deal of bookkeeping. She helps check orders as they come in, keeps running inventory of foods and supplies to use as a guide when ordering. She uses the checklist as a count of people eating in the cafeteria each day to enable her to decide an adequate quantity of food. Other jobs include her keeping of inventory sheets, and her regular inspection of the two storage rooms, the three coolers, and the freezer. During her three years here at Wesleyan, she has completely reorganized the storage rooms.

Although she estimated that she spends about 40 to 45 hours working with the cafeteria and food services, Mrs. Batchelor said that she is never conscious of the hours spent each week in performing her job. Usually she just works until she finishes a job. Although there is pressure, she stressed that her job is rewarding, and that compliments from students about the food or services made it worthwhile. At a conference in Jacksonville next weekend Mrs. Batchelor hopes to gain new ideas which will help her improve the food or service of the cafeteria.
