

EURONEWS

Now any student can independently earn his or her trip to Europe by simply obtaining a paying job in Europe. A few weeks work at a resort, hotel, or similar job in Europe paying free room and board plus a wage more than pays for the new $165 round-trip Youth Fare being offered by the scheduled airlines. A couple more weeks on the job earns money for traveling around Europe before returning home.

Thousands of paying student jobs are available in Switzerland, France, Germany, Italy and Spain. Neither previous working experience nor knowledge of a foreign language are required for many jobs. However, to make certain every student gets off to a good start on their job the Student Overseas Services (SOS) provides job orientation in Europe. Jobs immediately available include resort, hotel, restaurant, hospital, farm, and sales work. Jobs almost always pay free room and board in addition to a standard wage.

Jobs, work permits, visas, and other necessary working papers are issued to students on a first come, first served basis. Although thousands of jobs are immediately available, applications should be submitted far enough in advance to allow SOS ample time to obtain the necessary working papers and permits. Any student may obtain an application form, job listings, and the SOS handbook on earning a trip to Europe by only sending their name, address, name of educational institution, and $1 (for addressing, handling, and air mail postage from Europe) to SOS—Student Overseas Services, Box 5173, Santa Barbara, California 93180.

Applications are available in the DECREE office now.

The following jobs are available. Interested students should write immediately.

FRANCE—Factory jobs available during the summer. Good wages, relatively short hours and shift work allows time off to visit Paris, Amsterdam and other nearby cities. Grape picking work available during late summer months in wine regions. Free room and board, wages, and free wine are provided. Some child care work available throughout the year, camp counseling available during the summer months. Other jobs available to students having some knowledge of French.

SWITZERLAND — Hotel, restaurant, resort, hospital, and farm jobs are available. Room and board are always provided free in addition to wages and tips. Wages for these jobs range from $120 to $240 per month. In addition to clean air and unpolluted lakes Switzerland offers an excellent central location in Europe.

“MANPOWER” Provides Jobs

College students thinking about where to go looking for a job this summer shouldn't overlook temporary help firms.

These are companies who provide other companies with part-time help. Sometimes the job at a particular company may last for one day, sometimes a week, a month, or even longer. There are more than 1,000 in the United States.

In the past, these temporary firms have provided a variety of summer jobs for students.

The acknowledged giant in the temporary service industry is Manpower, Inc. It is a worldwide firm and depends not only on its regular force of temporary help throughout the year, but during the summer relies heavily on students seeking part-time employment.

Some people think of Manpower, Inc. as an employment agency. But Manpower's executive vice-president, James D. Scheinfeld, points out, "We are the employer. The employee works for us and is paid by us. We are responsible for all the records kept on the employee. When a company needs someone to fill in for a vacationing employe, or when a regular employe calls in sick, a company can contact Manpower. The replacement we send out is still our employe."

What can Manpower offer students who are looking for jobs?

A student in Nashville, Tennessee college signed up with Manpower, and, before the summer was over, found herself running Manpower's office. It happened when Manpower's office manager became ill. Her office skills and ability to deal with customers and other temporary employes made her the natural choice.

In another Manpower office in the Southwest, a college student got a sneak preview of an adventure novel being written by an M.D. by typing his manuscript.

College students also benefit year around from having worked in a Manpower office during the summer. In one area for example, a Manpower owner hires college men and women for part-time work throughout the year if they have worked for him before.

He has made arrangements with nearby colleges to supply ticket takers, ushers, parking lot attendants, and, in some cases, general security guards, whenever there are major sporting events — basketball and football games and the like.

One of the greatest advantages in working for a temporary service firm is the range of working experiences it provides.

For many, it may be the first job, like the young Minneapolis woman who went to a Manpower office. Although she had no previous work history, she could type. She made such a good impression during her assignments that the customers always asked for her the next time they needed someone.

The result is that now, every summer, she knows where she can get a summer job. She has established herself, and she has work experience, which is an asset to all employers.

United Action For Animals Recruit College Executives

Eleanor Seiling, President of United Action for Animals, Inc., announced today that UAA is turning to the universities in an intensive search for young executive talent. "A new breed of humane leaders is needed," she said, "and they should come from the reservoir of well-educated young people now in our universities and about to embark upon their careers." She noted that historically almost all of the people in animal welfare work in general and laboratory animal work in particular are there because of a keen sense of injustice to animals and a high degree of motivation, but, she observed, "they lack both the ability to inform themselves adequately and the professionalism needed to solve complex problems."

Miss Seiling is definite about the qualifications needed by candidates. "A broadly-based education is essential," she stated, "because anyone who is going to be effective in helping animals must develop a composite of many skills, including biology, law, advertising, public relations, and corporate administration. They must be diligent readers and able to write well. They must be adept at library research, competent analysts of what they read, and possess the ability to communicate articulately without being abrasively vocal." She said that a highly motivated person with a broad basic education can develop these skills but that it would take time. Miss Seiling estimates that it would require four years of intensive on-the-job training with UAA to prepare a candidate for the "kind of executive leadership we envisage."

The President of UAA pointed out that there exists a vital need for leaders of executive calibre in the field of animal welfare in general and laboratory animals in particular and that the rewards are great, personally and professionally. "But," she added, "candidates for this work must show a very high degree of motivation." Interested persons should write to United Action for Animals, Inc., 509 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017, giving full details, keeping in mind the qualifications outlined.

Good Bye And Good Luck . . . For The Last Time

had been interested. He went on in the course, went to college and then dropped out. That's the cookies though. When I got to Wesleyan I decided to try again. I walked into the Decree office and talked to Julie Robinson, the Editor at that time. I was on the staff . . . as a typist. Well at least I was on the staff. By second semester I was Sports Writer. I went from there to Assistant Lay-out Manager and Sports Editor to Editor-In-Chief. That's a big jump in four years, but that's Wesleyan. This school has so much to offer if you will just reach out and take it. Don't get mad or upset and quit the first time you lose out to the other guy and get that "It was nice that you were interested though" speech. Go back again and again and you'll end up at the top. Who knows maybe you'll even be Editor-In-Chief!!!

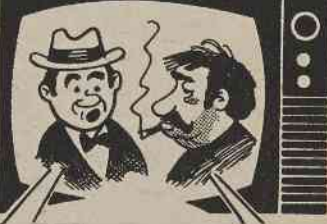

As for my fellow seniors, what can I say. It's been four years. I hope they have been enjoyable. There is a touch of nostalgia in this issue with the two page spread in our class, but I hope that you will go farther than that. Think about your first days on campus. The blue beannies that we were the last to wear, and those first acquaintances and dates. Neal Chancey was hung in effigy and Wesleyan won not one but two varsity championships in one week. I could go on and on but it would be senseless and this is not supposed to be a tearjerker.

In closing I would like to give special thanks to everyone who made this, the largest issue ever, possible. There are not words for that can express what I would have to say about Tom, but those of you that know him will understand. To Mr. Kagey I owe meeting my deadline. The days that I came late to May Term or had to take off completely are due to his kindness and understanding. Peggy Verkler, my Typist, probably doesn't even have any fingers left, but she definitely deserves more than just a byline. Thanks "Duck." Anna Galfano, was an all around help. She charmed more people into buying ads than we ever thought possible. Mosby and Herb, keep the pictures coming. And last but not least there are Sterling Bodenhamer and Robin Rider who kept finding things for me that I would lose under all the garbage on my desk. They are the ones who gave me the moral support when I was down. Happy reading, and may you find as much happiness at Wesleyan as I have. Good-bye and good luck for the last time.
