Spring Symposium looks to Year 2000

An economics expert from the World Bank will lead off a two-day event next week at North Carolina Wesleyan College on the issues and trends affecting modern life through the rest of the century.

Dennis J. Mahar, deputy division chief of the Population, Health and Nutritional Department of the World Bank in Washington, D.C., will deliver the keynote address for Wesleyan's 1987 Spring Symposium set for next Tuesday and Wednesday. This year's Symposium is titled "Countdown to the Year 2000: Moving Toward a World Economy."

The Spring Symposium is an annual event which thoroughly examines a single topic of current interest. All lectures and discussions take place on campus, and admission to all sessions is free.

Dr. Marshall Brooks, acting dean of the college and co-chairman of the Symposium, said the planning committee this year chose a subject that touched not only the United States but Rocky Mount as well.

"No matter how isolated from the world we Americans feel from time to time, we are truly not isolated," he said. "We are touched by events around the globe and are more a part of the world economy than we imagine."

With the year 2000 just over a decade away, Brooks said "it's time to take a futuristic look at what lies ahead of us. This area is becoming recognized more and more as an important economic region in the southeastern United States. The community should take advantage of this opportunity to look ahead in terms of our economy."

Mahar, before becoming a deputy division chief, was senior economist for the World Bank's Eastern and Southern Africa Region, and at various times a senior economist, loan officer and consultant for the Bank's Latin America and Caribbean Region. Mahar's major fields of expertise lie in the economy of Latin America, public finance, and the economics of population, health and nutrition.

Both days of the Symposium will begin with an address by a guest speaker in the morning, followed by several mini-sessions in the afternoon. Brooks explained, "The keynote speakers set the sense of the big picture, while the smaller concurrent sessions relate the Symposium theme to our community."

Mahar's address will kick off the Symposium on Tuesday, from 9:30-11 a.m. in Everett Building on the Wesleyan campus. His topic will be "Population Growth and Economic Development: Prospects for the Year 2000."

Following Mahar's address will be three concurrent sessions from 1:30-2:30 p.m. at various campus locations. Dr. David Bowman, a member of Gov. Jim Martin's Economic Committee Concerning North Carolina's Economic Future to the Year 2000, will moderate a session titled "Countdown to the Year 2000: N.C. Economy" in 105 Gravelly; Wesleyan's Assistant Professor of Business Administration Sally Craven will moderate "Women in the Year 2000" in room 276; and Wesleyan's Assistant Professor of Business Administration Mel Oliver will moderate "U.S. Domestic Policy and its International Implications" in Garber Hall.

A reception will follow in the Trustees Room at 2:45 p.m.

Two films will be shown: "Quicksilver," from 3-4:30 p.m. in the T.V. Lounge; and "Gung Ho," from 7-8:30 p.m. in the T.V. Lounge.

Michael Mozingo, public relations director for Food Lion, will deliver Wednesday's keynote address on "Entrepreneurship" in Everett Building from 9-10 a.m.

Three concurrent sessions will be held on Wednesday from 10:30-11:30 a.m. Wesleyan's Professor of Religion Dr. Rexford Tucker and Assistant Professor of Business Administration William Silber will moderate "Ethics and Values in the Year 2000" in Garber Hall; Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice John Stevens will moderate "White Collar Crime in the Year 2000" in 105 Gravelly, and a film on entrepreneurship will be screened in room 276.

The last group of sessions will run from 1:30-2:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Associate Professor of History Dr. Kenneth Finney will moderate "Technology and Its Effect on Society" in room 276; Director of Evening and Extension College Programs Valerie Meicher will moderate "Education in the Year 2000" in Garber Hall; and Charles Dunn, assistant deputy director of the State Bureau of Investigation, will moderate "Impact of Drug Use in the Year 2000" in 105 Gravelly.

Two movies will be screened that evening: "Gung Ho," from 3-4:30 p.m., in the T.V. Lounge; and "Quicksilver," from 7-8:30 p.m., in the T.V. Lounge.

College students nationwide to hold Lobby Day

On April 2, college students from across the country will take action to help stop the nuclear arms race. The students will participate in the fourth annual University Lobby to end the Arms Race sponsored by United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM). The lobby day is a chance for students and faculty nationwide to urge Congress to pass legislation calling for a Comprehensive Test Ban treaty (CTB).

The Mutual Nuclear Warhead Testing Moratorium bill (H.R. 12), now in the House of Representatives, was introduced by Reps. Patricia Schroeder (D-CO) and Richard Gephardt (D-MO). With a vote likely in early April, the April 2 Lobby Day can make a real difference.

Lobby Day is more than an opportunity to lobby for an end to the arms race. The event includes briefings with national arms control lobbyists, a march to the Capitol followed by a rally on the Capitol East Side to ban nuclear tests, and appointments with participants' Congresspersons.

This year, for the first time, UCAM is offering a Leadership Development Program on the day following Lobby Day. The April 3 workshops will train students in such skills as organizing educational events, working with the media, fundraising, and getting nuclear war curricula on campus.

UCAM, the only organization devoted to building a campus movement to end the arms race, holds the annual event to teach students effective citizen skills for a lifetime of use.

The cost of participating in the events is $10. Housing will be arranged by the national office for a nominal fee. The registration fee includes a one year membership to UCAM and a subscription to the monthly Network News.
