

Officers for SGA elected

Brooke Lockwood, and Davilyn Cagle were unopposed in their election as Sophomore Class Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer, respectively.

The Junior Class President's seat on the SGA Senate remains vacant, as no one ran for that office. Junior Class officers will most likely be elected in the fall, along with Freshman Class officers and hall presidents.

Three members were also selected from several candidates to the next year's Judicial Board: Julie Duerler, Davilyn Cagle, and Matt Snyder. The Judicial Board, which has jurisdiction over any suspendable violations listed in the student handbook, will select a Senate representative from among themselves.

Current SGA vice president Karin Leshner said that "overall voter turnout was great!" However, she adds that she would like to have seen more students run for office. "Too many students complain," she said, "then do nothing about it."

The new Executive Board and Senate members will be installed in a ceremony on Monday during the open period.

Group donating children's books

The Student North Carolina Association of Educators at North Carolina Wesleyan College will be collecting books and money donations for books to be donated to the Edgecombe County Child Health Care Service.

The Child Health Care Center is located in Tarboro and serves 200 children per week. Children range in age from birth to five years old. The children who visit the clinic receive a book at the end of the appointment.

Those who would like to donate any books or money can contact the SNCAE officers: Kristie Warren at 985-5549, Edgecombe Hall 219; Kelly Best, 985-5329, North Hall 218; Christy Wood, 985-5315, North Hall 204; or Kelly Allen, 537-3001.

A box is also located for donations in Ms. Janice Fleming's office in the Education Department.

Campus radio station set to go on air next Monday these needs," McDowell said.

After 10 p.m., the music will vary. All music will have to be approved by Winstead. On weekends, the radio station will be handled by students from 2 p.m. to midnight.

The radio station has many aspects to it and different students are needed for different jobs. Such positions include announcers, program director, production director, general manager, music director, sports director, traffic director, engineering assistants, and sales manager.

At first, the radio station will sound like an amateur one, but McDowell said students must still need to be as professional as possible. At any given time, as many as 400,000 listeners may be tuning in, and all it would take is one complaint to the FCC from one listener to shut the station down, he said.

"The radio station is for the students to enjoy. They should have fun with it, but they also need to remember that this is serious business," he said.

Fairly explained, "The most difficult part of a radio station in terms of announcing is one must learn hand-eye-mouth coordination. The announcers will have to audition, and everyone will not make the cut."

Announcers will have a 30-minute training session where the student will go through the stages of working in the radio station.

"This is a very exciting time for students and the college," McDowell said. "The radio station is a student radio station" which is in the embryonic stage.

Many things are temporary and many changes will most likely occur as students begin to work on the station. So as WESQ begins its life on the airwaves, so continues the expansion of the college life and education of North Carolina Wesleyan College.

arts disciplines and are instructed by professional artists with degrees and exhibition records in their fields.

Wesleyan's Contemporary Arts Festival will also feature various lectures and 20th century music and theater performances every evening of the one-week festivities. Selected music will include pieces by Schostakovich, Stravinsky, Schumann, Johnston, Brooks, Hovhaness, Ives, Tyson, Peck, Genzmer, Francaix, Lamb, Barroll, and others. A new play by Peter Cipkowski and various one-acts will be performed in Coltrane Theatre for the festival.

As an added attraction, three art shows will be held — a faculty-staff show, students' show, and an Outsider Art show.
