

Lady Bishops lose in first round

By ELLEN STANTON

North Carolina Wesleyan's women's soccer team was held scoreless in a tie with Methodist College on Oct. 29, leaving both teams as co-champions of the Dixie Conference for 1992 with a record of 2-0-1.

It was just bad luck that prevented the Lady Bishops from scoring. Wesleyan's players held the upper hand throughout the game, outshooting Methodist five to one. Wesleyan tried very hard to get the ball past Methodist's goalie, Kate Konard, but the ball would often go wide or hit posts.

Methodist was somewhat defensive, considering the quickness of the Lady Bishops. The game was played mostly in the Lady Monarch end of the field. Wesleyan never let up the entire match. Chris Webb and Amy Tolley had several shots on the goal that would not go in. Other key players were Julie Duerler, Kate Mangrum, and Tina Riley.

Although Wesleyan dominated both halves of the hard-fought game, the game was left tied at 0-0 after a 30-minute overtime.

Unfortunately, Wesleyan could not defeat Mary Washington on Nov. 4, losing 1-0 in the first round of the NCAA regional tournament.

Wesleyan had no problem being psyched for the game. They had a seven-game winning streak and a two-year winning streak at home. They were also ranked fifth in the nation and first-seed in the region.

A shot from Lady Eagle's Becky Miller bounced off the hand of Wesleyan goalie Jennifer Gardner into the goal, giving the Eagles the only score of the game and ending Wesleyan's season.

The match was fairly even. The Lady Eagles had about as many attempts at the goal as Wesleyan. The Lady Bishops' fire was fueled after Mary Washington scored off the weirdly angled ball, but Wesleyan's several attacks on the goal were unsuccessful. Despite Wesleyan's loss, they played well defensively.

Womens' soccer team enjoyed special share of 'Senior Magic'

By BRAD BARNES

We all know that the Lady Bishop soccer team put in another fine season this year. We know that records were broken. We know that they are considered one of the best Division Three soccer teams in the land. Rather than tell you a bunch of facts and stats about this year's Lady Bishop soccer team (we will leave that up to the yearbook), let's focus on something else.

If you were sitting in Boston Garden watching Larry Bird, it would be called Boston Pride. If you were watching Notre Dame football and saw images of Ara Parseghian and Knute Rockne running up and down the sidelines in the small frame of a man named Lou, it would be called tradition. If you were at North Carolina Wesleyan College and have ever seen or known seniors Kate Mangrum, Kari Zoeckler, and Debbie Wade on or off the field, you would call it Senior Magic. It is all the same.

Kate Mangrum came to the Bishop soccer program in 1988 by way of Fort Washington, Md. The "Katester" started all 18 games as freshman and by the time the team was finished, it was ranked 15th in the nation and on its way to a berth in the NCAA's. Kate had to redshirt her 1990 year because of surgery resulting from a knee injury. You would think a player would have just given up on the game after that — it just made Mangrum work that much harder to come back and finish the game she loves so much.

Debbie Wade, the second of the three from the class of 1988, came from Richmond, Va. Wade also made an impact as a freshman. She led that team in total points with 11 and did the same in her sophomore season. Said head coach Patrick Baker, "Her speed and powerful shots created numerous opportunities for her and her teammates." In 1990, she led the team assists with seven. In the last year she came off the bench to provide many quality minutes for the Lady Bishops.

Kari Zoeckler, another product of Richmond, Va., is known for her hard work and relentless defensive play. She started all 17 games for the Battling Bishops during her freshman year. In 1991 in a game against Allegheny, "Spudds," as she is called by her friends, had the assist that tied the game to give the Bishops the momentum to go on to beat Allegheny 3-1.

The three horsewomen will be missed. "As freshmen we looked up to them," said juniors Kerri Makar and Jennifer Gardner. "They are irreplaceable and they will be missed."

"I will miss them on and off the field," said sophomore Trish Parker, "and I wish them the best of luck."

1992-1993 Basketball schedules

Men's Team		Women's Team
Date	Opponent	Date	Opponent
Nov. 20-21	Shenandoah Tournament	Nov. 21	Guilford
Nov. 24	Guilford*	Nov. 24	Barton College
Dec. 4-5	Roger Taylor Tournament*	Nov. 30	St. Andrews*
Dec. 9	Barton College*	Dec. 2	Meredith
Dec. 12	College of Charleston	Dec. 5	Randolph-Macon*
Jan. 7	Salisbury State	Dec. 9	Barton College*
Jan. 9-10	Marymount Tournament	Dec. 12	Marymount*
Jan. 13	Greensboro*	Dec. 18	Mt. Olive*
Jan. 16	Averett	Jan. 8-9	Frostburg State Tournament
Jan. 20	Methodist College	Jan. 13	Greensboro*
Jan. 23	Ferrum College*	Jan. 16	Averett
Jan. 26	Mary Washington	Jan. 18	Ferrum*
Jan. 28	Shenandoah*	Jan. 20	Methodist
Jan. 30	Christopher Newport*	Jan. 23	Mt. Olive
Feb. 2	Apprentice School	Jan. 26	Mary Washington
Feb. 6	Ferrum	Jan. 28	Virginia Wesleyan
Feb. 10	Averett*	Jan. 30	Christopher Newport*
Feb. 13	Greensboro	Feb. 4	Meredith*
Feb. 16	Methodist*	Feb. 6	Ferrum
Feb. 20	Christopher Newport	Feb. 10	Averett*
Feb. 23	DIAC First Round	Feb. 13	Greensboro
Feb. 26-27	DIAC Tournament	Feb. 16	Methodist*
* Home Games		Feb. 20	Christopher Newport
		Feb. 23	DIAC First Round
		Feb. 26-27	DIAC Finals
		* Home Games

Poor sports, referees mar intramural football

By DAN MOYNIHAN

At its conception, football was a game that would test peoples' strength, skill, and endurance while maintaining an atmosphere of camaraderie and good sportsmanship. Unfortunately, here at Wesleyan the latter are not always in effect. As the Fab 14 faced off against the Untouchables on Tuesday, Nov. 3, rulebreaking and hostility were the rules, not the exception.

The game started off with both teams playing good naturedly while still trying their hardest to win. However, at some indefinite time in the first half, a member of the Untouchables threw an illegal crossbody at one of the 14.

For those who are unaware, all contact is illegal in Wesleyan Flag Football rules. The Fab 14 weren't particularly pleased when no flags were thrown and no whistles were blown at this time. Heckling of the referees began immediately from the Fab 14 sideline.

At halftime, the Untouchables had a commending lead while still managing to squeeze in the time and effort to illegally block, elbow, and clip their opponents. By this time, the Fab 14 were fighting back with their own arsenal of unsportsmanlike and illegal moves. While they maintain they did not start the hostilities, they were doing everything in their power to come out on top of them.

Opinion

With the beginning of the second half came a barrage of illegalities from both teams. Clotheslines, bodychecks, and the occasional tackle attempt could be seen by all. All but the referees, it seemed. With incompetence that would make Larry, Curly and Moe proud, the officials tried to salvage what authority they had left. But it seemed they were powerless to stop the continuing decline of fair play, with none of the three "knowing their buttocks from their elbow," said Fab 14 defenseman James Wiseman. When pressured for a call, the referees often looked befuddled and replied that the inquisitor should check with another ref.

The highlight of the game could be said to be when Fab 14 Grant Long was given a season-long suspension for running up and down the sidelines, offering the officials a pair of eyeglasses, taunting them all the way. Most of the spectators on hand found this episode amusing, while at the same time thinking it indicative of the reprehensible behavior of both teams throughout the game.

When all was said and done, and the end whistle blown, victory was awarded to the Untouchables, with both teams getting stern reprimands from the officials and warnings not to let it happen again. Fab 14 captain Derrick Smith said, "This whole game was a disgrace. Poor sportsmanship, bad playing, and, of course, the worst officiating possible contributed to the outcome of this game."

Regardless of who won or lost, the game itself reflected badly upon both teams and the intramural program in general. Both teams expressed disappointment in the way that the game was carried out, and wish for better sportsmanship and officials in the future.