Wesleyan adds three agreements

Students who receive associates degrees from Pierce Junior, Vance-Granville Community, and Lenior Community colleges can now continue their education and earn a bachelor's degree from North Carolina Wesleyan College.

A similar agreement has been signed with Nash Community, Edgecombe Community, and Brevard colleges.

Under this agreement, students who receive an associate degree from these colleges will be considered juniors at Wesleyan if they choose to continue their education. Associate degrees eligible for this agreement vary for each college. For a detailed list of eligible degrees, contact Assistant Dean Cliff Sullivan at 985-5258.

Transfer students to Wesleyan can receive tuition grants consistent with other Wesleyan students. Tuition grants include the Wesleyan Award of $2,000 per year to any student who has earned a 2.50 cumulative grade point average. Wesleyan agrees to provide this award to students who enroll as a full-time day student on the Rocky Mount campus. The award is renewable each year the student meets these requirements.

Journal to publish article by Stump

By SCOTT ROLFE

R.N. Janice Stump, director of the NCWC wellness center, recently got the honor of being accepted to be published in the Journal of American College Health.

Nurse Stump has been caring for the Wesleyan community for approximately ten years. She has an impressive background of education and experience in the nursing and medical field. Stump attended several colleges and most recently earned a B.S. degree from Barton College in Wilson. Nurse Stump's article will be included in the professional Journal of American College Health. The article will be out in six months.

The Journal of American College Health includes articles written by professionals in the field of college health. The journal can be found at many universities and colleges throughout the United States, and even overseas. The

Club plans radio station by students

By ALAN P. FELTON

Student Radio is the newest campus organization to be recognized by the Wesleyan Student Government Association.

The club, currently consisting of 20 members, is organized to provide student-controlled radio programming to supplement the current public broadcasting on WESQ, the North Carolina Wesleyan College radio station. The student broadcasts would provide the audio for North Carolina Wesleyan's cable television channel, and would not be broadcast except on that channel. The target start-up date for Student Radio is Apr. 1.

Lawrence Guyot, president of Student Radio, said that since WESQ is a public radio station there was a need to create another station set up and operated by students. However, Guyot said the station and its broadcasting would be open to staff and faculty in order to provide everyone on campus with an opportunity to participate.

The goal of Student Radio is to provide for every type of taste represented in the Wesleyan community. Guyot also detailed several broadcasting regulations that were being implemented by the club. Although these regulations would not be sponsored by the FCC, they could cover use of profanity, slander, and other broadcast violations.

Student Radio has asked the Student Government Association for $2,000 in funding. An anonymous donor has pledged to give $500 if the SGA approves funding.

Student Radio meets each Tuesday night at 9 p.m. in the South Hall lobby. Those who wish to participate in Student Radio or have programming ideas are asked to contact either Lawrence Guyot at Box 3347 or Alex MacDonald at Box 3604.

NCWC Republicans attend state convention

By JIMMILYN ROSSON

Five students from Wesleyan attended the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans (NCFRC) Spring Convention Feb. 19 at the State Capital Holiday Inn, in Raleigh.

Republican students came from all over the state, representing various colleges. Some of the colleges in attendance were Duke, UNC (delegates from all campuses), Elon, Campbell, and Methodist, among others.

For NCWC College Republicans, (CR), the day began when delegates left campus around 7:30 a.m.. Arriving in Raleigh, the Wesleyan CR's acquainted themselves with people from other colleges.

There were a number of speakers, one of which was North Carolina's 2nd District Congressional candidate and former U.S. Ambassador to Romania, Dr. David Funderburk. Funderburk was not alone when he made a Clinton crack, as many other speakers did as an introduction to their speeches.

While discussing the possible tobacco tax, Funderburk said, "Clinton says he smoked marijuana but didn't inhale, well North Carolinians say chew tobacco, but don't spit!"

Following Funderburk's speech, all delegates voted on proposed resolutions, one of which was whether or not NCFRC was to endorse Funderburk for Congress. Prior to this resolution, there had been no objections, and everything passed smoothly.

When this resolution was brought up, Duke University delegates strongly protested and opened a debate that lasted for a hour, putting the entire day's agenda behind schedule. The decision was finally reached that NCFRC would, in fact, endorse Funderburk as 2nd District Congressional Candidate.

Before NCFRC held its officer election, every college's chairman (club president) announced all the projects they are planning at their schools, the number of convention delegates in attendance from their schools, and the number of members in each colleges'

NCFRC chapter.

Wesleyan's own CR Chairman Brad Barnes received a standing ovation from the entire audience after announcing his conservative views, particularly when he said, "I am not an African-American, I am a black American." The crowd roared with support. Barnes was the only chairman to receive a standing ovation.

Other CR members representing Wesleyan were Vice President Derrick Cruz, Secretary Jimmilyn Rosson, Treasurer Brian Baker, and Greg Purcell.
