

Firm eases way to graduate school

Graduate school deadlines are approaching very quickly for next fall, and it is not too early to be planning for entry in 2000!

It can be incredibly frustrating and time-consuming to research the best universities in your field. American Universities Admission Program (AUAP), based in Sarasota, Fla., can help.

AUAP is a scholar's service organization created initially for international students, though Americans decided they liked the service too. The mission is to help in the selection of and admission to the best universities for the student, and the success has been phenomenal.

Over the last three years,

AUAP has helped gain admission spots at hundreds of universities, including Harvard, Brown, Stanford, Johns Hopkins, Cornell, Columbia, Northwestern, NYU, UCLA, Purdue, U. of Arizona, Boston U., and U. of Michigan to name only a few.

AUAP guarantees at least one admission offer in its Admissions

Program, and that is because the research and match for each student is the best possible. Most students gain two or three offers.

AUAP counselors, who all have worked (or do work) in university admissions, have the expertise and experience to take the questions and hassles out of the research and application process. AUAP is a modern virtual organization and uses the best people all over the United States and across the globe.

The Selection Program costs $350. Students receive within one month of requesting the service (and completing a questionnaire and interview) a detailed report of the research selecting the five best university programs, with all essential details and why the universities were chosen. AUAP also requests the catalogs and application forms to be sent to the student.

In the Admissions Program

($2,000) all university application fees are paid, the counselor assists the student with the applications, edits and positions the essays, notarizes documents handles educational evaluations and stays in touch with the Admission Committees until an offer is made. AUAP can also pay for and arrange the GRE or GMAT exam and any other necessary test as a service.

AUAP also offers a consulting program ($100 an hour) for any or all educational needs as well as several other valuable services.

The right graduate school can make all the difference in a student's career and reaching their goals. AUAP can help students realize those goals.

Actor David Dossey slated to share insights on acting

This Tuesday, North Carolina Wesleyan will have the opportunity to meet professional actor David Dossey, who will be speaking in Powers Recital Hall at 9:40 a.m.

Dossey will be sharing interesting stories and firsthand comments for those who would like to hear from a really fine actor.

Dossey has performed in the NBC television series Homicide as "Eddie," in "Don't be Alarmed" on Comedy Central, and was the "Burly Man" in the Lorimar Film, Outside Woman. He has performed on Broadway, appearing in Inherit the Wind as "Bannister."

Dossey has also appeared in several off-Broadway Shakespearean productions, Henry V, As You Like It, Titus Andronicus, and Measure for Measure.

Dossey has numerous regional theatre credits too. Included are performances at Burning Coal Theatre, JFK Center for the Performing Arts, Washington Jewish Theatre, Huey P. Long Theatre, Baltimore Shakespeare Festival, Round House Theatre, and Coconut Grove Theatre in Miami.

Dossey is a member of Screen Actors Guild and Actors Equity. He has a MFA from Louisiana State University and has taught several college theater classes. Dossey has also taught several workshops designed for different levels. Included is Creating a Character for "the adult actors wishing to improve their skills" and Commedia dell'Arte: History and Influence on Modern Comedy for high school students.
