Hi, currently we are in the beginning phases of rolling-out a cutting-edge online news magazine, and are looking for a couple section editorial interns, and as many freelance writers as we can get. Topics will cover many areas including news, business/finance, sex, technology, culture, and sports.

The magazine will be generally a monthly publication, with a few updates throughout the month. Time commitment for section editors will most likely in the 10-20 hours a week range. Although we cannot pay interns, if your work proves successful it could easily lead to a paid, staff position. We expect very high traffic numbers in the coming weeks. A great groundfloor opportunity and an excellent addition to a writer's resume. For info, contact me at jcambron@zorngroup.com If you have a resume and/or clips, feel free to send them on.

Company: Sports Fiends, Inc.
Industry: Online Media
Experience: Intern/Part-time
Location: Virginia
Salary: Unpaid
Ad Expires: March 06, 2004
Job ID: 368494

If you've always wanted to write about sports, this is your chance. SportsFiends.com is looking for aspiring sports writers, especially those candidates knowledgeable and interested in Hockey, Tennis, Soccer, and Golf.

The internship requires a minimum of three to five hours a week, and you can use existing unpublished sports related content to get started. SportsFiends.com will feature your column at regular intervals and automatically archive your work as new work is published.

As of now, this is an unpaid internship; ideal for students or aspiring sports journalists. We offer professional editing and international exposure of your work. Our expectation is that, at a minimum, interns would write one, 800 - 1200 word article a week.
