Two injuries in February have been due to unsafe habits while operators were cleaning their machines. In the machine shop, Orest Hedgecock failed to use goggles while blowing off his lathe at the end of the day; a piece of steel was imbedded in his eye. You have seen on page 6 the account of Blanche Noles who failed to stop her machine for cleaning. Jack Mabe received burns on his legs while cleaning out the boiler; this was a lost-time injury. Fay Burgess, Plant #7 folder, stepped back and caught her heel under a truck load of lot boards.
