ed.

In the Boarding Department, Ethel Carden says of payroll savings, "I just wanted to save a little out of each check so I would have a sort of back-log for emergency. It's so convenient to save this way--no bother at all."

Dorothy Hardin, boarder, Plant #1, says, "I wanted an individual savings account. I have a feeling that the bonds I have are personal savings. If I got hold of the money first, I didn't save it; so, I just went to my foreman, C. B. Owens, and told him I wanted to start saving by buying bonds. Fortunately, I have not had to cash any of them."

Rosa Lee Parrish says she bought bonds for a couple of years. "Then," she said, "we had some extra bills and I had to stop buying bonds. I had to cash some I had already bought, but we still have some we haven't cashed. I plan to start saving this way again soon."

"Several years ago, when they put on a bond drive in the plants and encouraged us to sign up for the payroll deduction plan, I started saving this way," Lillie Hill said. "I found when you don't get your hands on the money, you don't miss what you are saving. Then in an emergency when you need some money, you've got it."

Bobby Dills says, "I would not have started buying bonds without the last drive. I started then and am saving for my eight-year-old girl's education. I can keep bonds better than I can keep my money in any other way."

"I'm saving for my daughters. They will need it for an education," says Don Cardwell. "I've been saving through bonds for about three years and I'm 100% for it. You don't cash in bonds as quickly as you might some other savings plan. It's so convenient through the payroll plan."
